NOTES ON NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE FREEMAN WILL RECEIVE SUBSCRIPTIONS FOR THE SUFFERERS IN PENNSYLVANIA, AND MAKE DAILY ACKNOWLEDGMENTS OF THE AMOUNTS RECEIVED. THE FREEMAN'S SUBSCRIPTION LIST WILL CLOSE NEXT MONDAY.

THE ruined Chesapeake and Ohio Canal is yet so valuable a property that two railroads are contending for its purchase. It would shorten the Baltimore and Ohio's route to the West, or it would open a direct route for the Western Maryland from the mountains and coal fields to Washington.

THE estimate of the dead at Johnstown has fallen to 6,000, with liberal allowances for those who were destroyed in the fire against the bridge. The registry of survivors has become unexpectedly and gratifyingly large. This is the first good news from the scene of the catastrophe.

ONE of the survivors at Johnstown was Mrs. H. L. Peterson. While looking yesterday for the body of a lost friend, she came to a coffin with her name and a correct description of her personal appearance upon it. As she tore the card from the coffin an officer came up to arrest her, but she soon convinced him that she was not dead.

THE loss of property by fire at Seattle is estimated by the Coast Review at $7,000,000, on which there is $2,250,000 insurance. The city is already rising out of its ashes. Seattle was at the zenith of a big boom when the fire came, and the burning out of the cheap and inflammable structures will add to the value of the property. But there is great individual loss and suffering.

ATTORNEY GENERAL TABOR has notified the Governor that he must veto the Capitol Appropriation bill as a unit, or allow all the items to stand. The total is about $370,000, out of which the Governor was anxious to save only the $56,000 to improve the sanitary condition of the building, and reject the appropriation for the grand staircase. The sanitary improvement is badly needed.

THE evidence in the Cronin inquest bore still more heavily on Alexander Sullivan yesterday. One of his letters was read, in which he denounced Cronin as his personal enemy, a perjurer, scoundrel and British spy. Luke Dillon, one of the witnesses, declared his belief that Sullivan was responsible for, if not a participant in, the Cronin murder. The country is waiting to hear of Sullivan's arrest.

GOV. BULKELEY of Connecticut has vetoed the secret ballot bill. His principal reason is that the election machinery required would be too expensive for his little state. He talks of extensive disfranchisement, bartering the entire vote of precincts, etc., but of course this is fustian. The Governor was mortified by his failure to get a majority vote last fall, and is showing the spleen of a small politician.

DEVOE, the meteorologist and weather prophet of Hackensack, predicts a great cyclone at Washington between the 15th and 17th inst. It is going to come up so suddenly that the Signal Office will not have time to predict it. The "sun spot" man of the Rochester Chronicle predicted the storm that swept away Johnstown, and has risen to fame on the ruins. So look out for DeVoe and his cyclone.

As Kansas gave 80,000 majority against free trade last fall, the managers of the state university accepted this as a condemnation of free trade in the institution, and directed Prof. Canfield to drop the subject. As he refused to do this he has been bounced, and Prof. Blackmar of the University of California has taken his place. The people will now secure the sort of instruction that they vote and pay for.

THOSE people who make a business of falling on the sidewalks or into gutters and suing the city for damages, will be interested to learn that Michael Emperor, a member of their profession in New York, has been indicted for perjury and locked in the Tombs. Emperor swore, in a suit brought against the city for an injured leg, that he had never brought suit against a railway company on a similar claim. Proof was then obtained that he had brought suit against four different street railways, and received small sums from each in settlement. He will probably retire from his noble vocation for a few years.

THE St. Louis Republic continues to boom Gen. John M. Palmer of Illinois for the Democratic nomination for the Presidency. Palmer will be 75 years old before the national convention meets. Even if he should be alive, and Thurman should again consent to play second fiddle, the combination would have the look of a very venerable kangaroo, strongest in its hind legs, but badly rattled by time. But the nomination would be one of the best that could be made, because a Democrat only ceases to be dangerous to the country when he becomes senile.

THE wife and daughter of Private Secretary Halford were on the train that was washed away at Johnstown. The train reached Johnstown at 11 o'clock and could not proceed. At 3 the conductor heard the roar of the waters, and cried to passengers to fly to the hills for their lives. Mrs. Halford got out of the car safely, but the daughter returned to the seat for her mother's medicine case. When she came out the water was up to her waist, and she would have been swept away if Postoffice Inspector Spangler had not caught her in his arms and brought her to land. She is now quite ill from fright and a carriage ride of forty miles.

THE Johnstown catastrophe has frightened the people of Olean, now a town of 15,000 inhabitants. The feeder for the old Genesee Valley Canal, which is now a sportsmen's paradise, is one-third larger than the late Conemaugh reservoir, and lies 782 feet higher than the town. It is said to be the largest artificial body of water in the United States. If it were to give way, which it is more likely to do at any moment that was the Conemaugh dam apparently, it would sweep away not only Olean, but Cuba, Hinsdale, Allegany, and towns farther down the Genesee valley. Ten years ago this dam burst, letting out 15 feet of water and flooding the valley for 150 miles.

GENERAL TELEGRAPH NEWS

Money for the relief of the sufferers by floods and by fire in Pennsylvania continues to be subscribed. To-day's tidings follow:

AT JOHNSTOWN TO-DAY.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., June 8.—This is the eighth day since the flood swept down the Valley of the Conemaugh, but the desolation that marked its passage is still visible in all directions. To the watchers on the mountain side all seems yet chaos and confusion, but the thousand fires in the valley show that the torch is being used to complete the work of annihilation where repair is impossible. By 8 o'clock this morning the corps of Government engineers that arrived last night had stretched a pontoon bridge across the River at Kernville. Acting in conjunction with the Pennsylvania military authorities, they are pursuing their labors at other points, and by sundown it is expected pontoon bridges will be erected at all places where the necessities of traffic demand. The day opened with a heavy rain and an early morning thunder storm. The hillside streams are filled to the banks and everything is dripping. The air is chilly and damp. The weather apparently had no effect on the people, for as soon as the early breakfast was over the thousands of workmen could be seen going to their work. While the rain is far from pleasant to the workers and the many helpers, it is certainly providential that the cool weather is continuing in order to prevent the much dreaded decomposition of the hundreds of human bodies yet unrecovered and thousands of animals that perished. The air this morning, while tainted to some extent with the fumes arising from the decaying bodies, was not near so much so as yesterday. What is needed is a strong cool breeze to sweep down through this valley to purify the air and carry away the poisonous gases. By 7 o'clock the whole valley was full of people and the scene was a most animated one. The various sections of the flooded territory were full of men busy searching for the dead and removing and burning the debris. At 8 o'clock five corpses had been taken from the mass at the stone bridge. A large force of men is now working on this part of the wreck. A most welcome arrival this morning was Dr. H. Bullen, of disinfectant fame. He brought 50 barrels more of his disinfectant. The Doctor will take charge of the disinfecting of the dangerous sections of the flooded district, notably at the stone bridge. From Bolivar to Johnstown the side tracks of the Pennsylvania Railroad are filled with cars loaded with lumber, furniture and goods and wares of all description for the sufferers.

The Cambria Iron Company's works present a busy scene to-day. Nine hundred men are at work and rapid progress is being made in clearing away the wreck. It is said the works will start in about three weeks. There is little change in the situation and everyone is working with the one end in view, to clear away the wreckage and give the people of Johnstown a chance to rebuild. About 10 o'clock the rain was over and the sun came out with its fierce June heat.

Arthur Kirk has fired a number of charges of dynamite during the day, and each time with good effect. The channels to the bridge are almost clear of debris, and each charge of dynamite has loosened large quantities of wreckage.

About 40 bodies were recovered up to 3 o'clock this afternoon. Of these only three were found at the bridge.

DUBLIN, June 8.—Lord Mayor Sexton has cabled to America £1,000 for the relief of the Johnstown sufferers.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

NEW-YORK, June 8.—President J. Edward Simmons, of the Fourth National Bank, made a report to-day showing that the amount of money paid to him, as Treasurer of the Relief Fund, amounted at the close of banking hours to-day, to $316,872, which included $52,885 sent to the bank direct. The only draft thus far made on this is one for $50,000. Subscriptions continue to come in large numbers to Mayor Grant. The total sum so far received at Mayor Chapin's office in Brooklyn is $40,504.

OSWEGO, N. Y., June 8.—The receipts of an entertainment given at the Armory by the Twenty-Ninth and Thirty-Eighth Separate Companies, N. G. S. N. Y., last night, for the benefit of the Johnstown sufferers, were about $400. A general meeting of the citizens is called for to-morrow afternoon for the purpose of raising money for the sufferers.

INCIDENTS OF THE FLOOD.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

LOCKPORT, Pa., June 8.—The people of this City are facing their troubles bravely and now have matters well in hand. The first car load of provisions reached here and was distributed yesterday. Two other car loads have since arrived. A commissary department has been opened and supplies are being issued as fast as possible. A large force of men and teams are at work removing the debris and filth from the streets and every effort possible is being made to put the City in a better sanitary condition. Reports of heavy losses sustained by farmers continue to come.

SOUTH FORK DAM, Pa., June 8.—This community is in a wild state of excitement as a result of the recent flood. The blame of the entire affair has been placed upon the South Fork Hunting and Fishing Club, and so angry are some of the people in this vicinity that trouble is feared for W. S. Boyer, Superintendent of the cottages on the Lake. Already several of the villas have been broken into and the furniture demolished. The boats have been stolen and reduced to kindling wood.

TROY, March 8.—Richard Whitehouse, Sr., an iron worker, left Cohoes for Johnstown, Pa., just before the great disaster there, and it is feared he has been lost, as all efforts to communicate with him by telegraph have proved futile.

MINOR NOTES OF THE DELUGE.

A Pittsburg paper tells this pathetic little incident which it noted at Sixth street bridge: A woman's little black and red bonnet, crushed almost out of shape, floating down the river, brought forth the remark from a white-haired old gentleman: "There goes the bonnet of some poor fellow's wife or mother; perhaps they're gone, too." Two ladies standing by, overhearing, instantly burst into tears, to the evident discomfiture of the old gentleman, who, after a grand effort to preserve his dignity, followed suit.

L. L. Smith, General Manager of the Gautier Steel Works, who has lived all his life in Johnstown, has told the Easton Free Press: "That Pennsylvania Railroad bridge did the whole damage. Had I been there I would have blown it up with dynamite had I been apprised in time of the flood that was coming. I told my wife last winter than in case of a big ice gorge against that bridge and the town was threatened with being flooded, I would blow up that bridge if I had to go to the penitentiary for it."

Vinton Welsh, standing at his front door in York, slipped off the step and was being carried down the street by the torrent, when three neighbors, at imminent risk, rescued him.

A Harrisburg paper of last evening says it will require weeks to restore the eastern portion of the City to its normal condition, and will involve the expenditure of a great sum.

At the lower end of Harrisburg bread and milk were being served at second-story windows on Tuesday from row-boats. All the houses were damp, and few had fires.

The Bush Lumber Company, of Wilmington, has an order from the Pennsylvania Railroad Company to ship at once all lumber that can be used to repair bridges.

The mother of a Jewish family in Sibletown gave birth to a child on the second floor of her residence while the waters poured into the lower story.

Decision as to "Woolen Waste."

By Telegraph to The Freeman

WASHINGTON, June 8.—The Treasury Department has rejected the appeal of the Providence Worsted Mills from the decision of the Collector of Customs at New-York, assessing duty at the rate of 60 cents per pound on certain so-called "worsted waste" which the appellants claimed to be dutiable at the rate of 10 cents per pound under the provision for "woolen waste." The United States Appraiser at New-York reports that the merchandize is not "woolen" or "worsted waste" within the decision of the Court in the case of the United States against Patton & Dobson, inasmuch as it consists almost entirely of broken laps, which although similar in character to broken tops, is one step further advanced in the manufacture of yarn and contains a slight admixture of ravelings.

Make the Whole World Kin.

By Cable to The Freeman.

LONDON, June 8.—The Times, commenting on the Johnstown disaster and the fire at Seattle, says: "While we may be thankful for immunity from these occasional penalties, we cannot forget, and it is satisfying to see that our countrymen have not forgotten that the Americans are our brethren, in sorrows and sufferings which make the whole world kin, and are entitled to special and active sympathy from ourselves."

The Chronicle says: "The Johnstown and Seattle disasters would appear to show that the rapidity with which our American cousins manage engineering and building operations is not always conducive to the safety of life and property when the elements attack them violently."

Visitors to the White House.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

WASHINGTON, June 8.—Among the President's callers to-day were Senators Teller and Plumb, Hon. T. E. Burton, of California; General Schenck, Representative Cheatham, M. M. Lewis and a small delegation from Virginia; John Nichols and P. B. Hawkins, of North-Carolina; John Price, of Birmingham; L. Anderson, of Kentucky; L. P. Featherstone, of Arkansas; M. S. White and P. W. Bryant, of Florida; Willard C. Block, of Iowa; James F. Drake, of Pueblo; J. T. McNary, of Indiana, and James P. Newcomb, of Texas.

An Officer's Sentence Commuted.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

WASHINGTON, June 8.—In the case of Captain George A. Armes, United States Army, retired, sentenced by General Court Martial to be dismissed from the service, the President has commuted the sentence in consideration of the good service which this officer has rendered, and of some mitigating circumstances connected with the offenses of which he was found guilty, to confinement within such limits as the Secretary of War may prescribe, and to deprivation of right to wear the uniform and insignia of his rank in the Army for a period of five years.

A Revolver Recklessly Used by a Boy.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

LOGANSPORT, Ind., June 8.—While a crowd of boys and girls were playing here on Thursday Charles Lewis handed a revolver to Charles Donaldson, and told him to shoot Catharine Gall, an eight-year-old child. Donaldson shot the girl in the face. The ball entered the right cheek and ranging upward came out near the ear.

Mandeville Again in Trouble.

By Cable to The Freeman.

LONDON, June 8.—The Public Prosecutor has ordered that another police summons be issued against Viscount Mandeville, the oldest son of the Duke of Manchester, whose bankruptcy was announced three months ago. The Viscount is charged with obtaining money under false pretenses.

Fatally Kicked While Intoxicated.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

WATERTOWN, N. Y. June 8.—Paul Grant an old man, is said to be dying at Burrville from kicks administered by George Wilson, son of the hotel-keeper there, while Grant was intoxicated. The District Attorney has gone to take the man's deposition.

Shipping News.

The steamer Hammonia from New-York has arrived at Plymouth.

The steamer Aurania from New-York has arrived at Queenstown.

The steamer Canada from New-York has arrived in England.

Shot by a Canal Boatman.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., June 8.—Samuel J. Martin, Captain of a Beach & Bancroft canal boat, is under arrest on charge of shooting Jackson Coe, one of the hands on the Daniel Letts, a few miles out of the City this morning.

ADDRESS OF W. E. GLADSTONE.

He Says Liberals are Moving in Right Direction at a Fair Pace.

By Cable to The Freeman.

LONDON, June 8.—W. E. Gladstone addressed a Liberal meeting at Weymouth today. He said the Liberal Party was moving in the right direction and at a fair pace. He spoke in favor of limiting the length of a Parliament to four or five years. Referring to Ireland, he admitted that crime had decreased there, and attributed the improvement to recent remedial measures, to the beneficial influence of Irish Members of Parliament and the priests, and above all to the knowledge possessed by the Irish people that a large majority of the people of England sympathized with them. It remained for Englishmen to say whether they will do a further act of justice which alone would give a true and indissoluble union of the various countries comprehended under the designation of Great Britain and Ireland.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

NEW-YORK, June 8.—The Post's London special says W. E. Gladstone spoke yesterday at Ramsay bareheaded in a thunder storm.

FOR THE SEATTLE FIRE SUFFERERS.

What Governor of Pennsylvania Says to the Governor of New-York.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

HARRISBURG, Pa., June 8.—Governor Beaver has invited Governor Hill, of New-York, to join him in a proclamation to the people of New-York and Pennsylvania, instructing them to make special contributions through their churches to-morrow for the relief of the sufferers by the disastrous fire at Seattle and has suggested that these collections be immediately forwarded to a Central Committee consisting of ex-President Cleveland, Jay Gould, of New-York, and George W. Childs, of Philadelphia, to the appropriate authorities in Washington Territory for the relief of the sufferers.

Strikes in Foreign Lands.

By Cable to The Freeman.

GLASGOW, June 8.—Three thousand dock laborers have struck for an increase of a half penny per hour. The stevedores have also struck. They demand an increase of a penny per hour.

BELFAST, June 8.—The strike of seamen and firemen has paralyzed the shipping business here.

The Death Record.

Mrs. Charles F. Adams, widow of the late Hon. C. F. Adams and mother of the Hon. John Quincy Adams and Charles F. Adams, President of the Union Pacific Railroad Company, died Thursday night at Quincy, Mass., aged 81 years. Besides those mentioned three children survive her—Brooks and Henry Adams and Mrs. Dr. Henry P. Quincy.

Railroad News.

The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul and the Chicago, St. Paul & Kansas City Railroads have notified Chairman Faithorne, of the Western Freight Association, that they will meet the new rates adopted by the Burlington & Northern in traffic from the seaboard to St. Paul via Chicago.

Decision About Fencing, in Wyoming.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

CHEYENNE, Wyoming, June 8.—The Territorial Supreme Court has decided that owners of land may fence the same even if in so doing they inclose Government or public land.

THE STOCK AND MONEY MARKET.

Financial Doings on Wall-Street To-Day—The Leading Closing Quotations.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

NEW-YORK, June 8.—All the animation displayed in the stock market during the past few days seemed to have disappeared this morning, and the market was quiet with the bulk of the business confined to a few shares. Missouri Pacific and Wabash preferred each rose ⅛. Chicago Gas declined a fraction and the other trusts shares were comparatively quiet. At 11 o'clock the market was dull and steady.

Died from Eating a Poisonous Weed.

On Thursday afternoon seven school children at Sand Lake, Rensselaer County, went into the woods to gather wintergreens. They found a root resembling sweet flag, and ate of it. The weed was poisonous, and two of the children, Lester Taylor and Ella Harris, are dead. The remainder of the children are very ill.

NEW LAWS IN THIS STATE.

THE CLAN-NA-GAEL AND DR. CRONIN.

Witness Who Refused to Tell the Name of a Presiding Officer.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

CHICAGO, June 8.—John Moss, a member of Camp No. 21, of the Clan-na-Gael, was put upon the witness stand at the Coroner's investigation into the manner of Dr. Cronin's death this morning. At a meeting subsequently to the murder a resolution was presented in this camp denouncing the deed. Moss moved that it be tabled remarking that "perhaps Dr. Cronin's removal was ordered by the Executive Committee." When called to the witness chair this morning and asked to give the name of the presiding officer of the camp he refused to do so and by order of the Coroner was taken into custody.

Pending the arrival of the Sheriff's Deputy, witness gave evidence of great mental distress and finally signified his willingness to testify. He then said the name of the presiding officer of his camp was William H. Joyce.

"When you made your motion on the Cronin resolution did you believe that the Executive Committee had the power to order the removal of any one?" queried the Coroner.

"I had not the faintest idea of the powers of the Executive Committee."

"If you had been ordered to remove any one would you have done it?"

"No, sir," said witness after a long pause.

Peter McGehan testified that he came to Chicago last February from Philadelphia. He did not say before leaving that he was going on dangerous business for the Executive Committee. He came because he had had a row with a young fellow about a girl. Dr. Cronin came up to witness on the street once and accused him of being in the City to murder him [Cronin]. Subsequently Cronin wrote witness telling him to get out of the State or he would have him arrested. Witness declared he was in Pullman on the night Cronin was murdered. Witness was taken into custody, and the inquest was adjourned.

A Cyclone in Kansas.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

WICHITA, Kans., June 8.—This section was visited yesterday by a most severe storm. The western part of Sedgwick County and the eastern part of Kingman County suffered most. A space 20 miles long by five miles wide was swept over by a cyclone. A farmer named Rogers and his family were killed, and many others are homeless. Heavy rain was followed by hail, which laid low the grain and fruit crop. In West Sedgwick County many houses and barns and acres of crops were leveled to the ground.

I BELIEVE IT YET.

I.

There's some useful information that I got from mother dear,
One evening when I went my girl to see;
She told me I had better be tasteful in my dress,
If from bitter disappointment I'd be free.
She told that Marks Jacobs made suits the handsomest;
That to his store was just the place to go,
That with his help I'd surely win the girl I loved best:
I believed it, for my mother told me so

CHORUS.

She told me that a manly man should dress in manly style,
And always like a gentleman should go;
That for this service I could trust Marks Jacobs all the while;
I believed it, for my mother told me so.

II.

And so I went to Jacobs' store, 184 The Strand,
The next morning at the rising of the sun,
And picked me out the finest that this artist had on hand,
And in just two days the suit complete was done.
Then I hied me to the mansion where lived my Katie Brown,
And her greeting was the sweetest man can know;
She said I was the handsomest, the noblest man in town;
I believed it, for my sweetheart told me so.

CHORUS.

She told me something better yet; she said she would be mine,
That through this life with me she'd gladly go,
If I would wear Marks Jacobs' suits, so fitting, neat and fine;
I believed it, for my Katie told me so.

NOTES ON NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE FREEMAN WILL RECEIVE SUBSCRIPTIONS FOR THE SUFFERERS IN PENNSYLVANIA, AND MAKE DAILY ACKNOWLEDGMENTS OF THE AMOUNTS RECEIVED. THE FREEMAN'S SUBSCRIPTION LIST WILL CLOSE NEXT MONDAY.

THE ruined Chesapeake and Ohio Canal is yet so valuable a property that two railroads are contending for its purchase. It would shorten the Baltimore and Ohio's route to the West, or it would open a direct route for the Western Maryland from the mountains and coal fields to Washington.

THE estimate of the dead at Johnstown has fallen to 6,000, with liberal allowances for those who were destroyed in the fire against the bridge. The registry of survivors has become unexpectedly and gratifyingly large. This is the first good news from the scene of the catastrophe.

ONE of the survivors at Johnstown was Mrs. H. L. Peterson. While looking yesterday for the body of a lost friend, she came to a coffin with her name and a correct description of her personal appearance upon it. As she tore the card from the coffin an officer came up to arrest her, but she soon convinced him that she was not dead.

THE loss of property by fire at Seattle is estimated by the Coast Review at $7,000,000, on which there is $2,250,000 insurance. The city is already rising out of its ashes. Seattle was at the zenith of a big boom when the fire came, and the burning out of the cheap and inflammable structures will add to the value of the property. But there is great individual loss and suffering.

ATTORNEY GENERAL TABOR has notified the Governor that he must veto the Capitol Appropriation bill as a unit, or allow all the items to stand. The total is about $370,000, out of which the Governor was anxious to save only the $56,000 to improve the sanitary condition of the building, and reject the appropriation for the grand staircase. The sanitary improvement is badly needed.

THE evidence in the Cronin inquest bore still more heavily on Alexander Sullivan yesterday. One of his letters was read, in which he denounced Cronin as his personal enemy, a perjurer, scoundrel and British spy. Luke Dillon, one of the witnesses, declared his belief that Sullivan was responsible for, if not a participant in, the Cronin murder. The country is waiting to hear of Sullivan's arrest.

GOV. BULKELEY of Connecticut has vetoed the secret ballot bill. His principal reason is that the election machinery required would be too expensive for his little state. He talks of extensive disfranchisement, bartering the entire vote of precincts, etc., but of course this is fustian. The Governor was mortified by his failure to get a majority vote last fall, and is showing the spleen of a small politician.

DEVOE, the meteorologist and weather prophet of Hackensack, predicts a great cyclone at Washington between the 15th and 17th inst. It is going to come up so suddenly that the Signal Office will not have time to predict it. The "sun spot" man of the Rochester Chronicle predicted the storm that swept away Johnstown, and has risen to fame on the ruins. So look out for DeVoe and his cyclone.

As Kansas gave 80,000 majority against free trade last fall, the managers of the state university accepted this as a condemnation of free trade in the institution, and directed Prof. Canfield to drop the subject. As he refused to do this he has been bounced, and Prof. Blackmar of the University of California has taken his place. The people will now secure the sort of instruction that they vote and pay for.

THOSE people who make a business of falling on the sidewalks or into gutters and suing the city for damages, will be interested to learn that Michael Emperor, a member of their profession in New York, has been indicted for perjury and locked in the Tombs. Emperor swore, in a suit brought against the city for an injured leg, that he had never brought suit against a railway company on a similar claim. Proof was then obtained that he had brought suit against four different street railways, and received small sums from each in settlement. He will probably retire from his noble vocation for a few years.

THE St. Louis Republic continues to boom Gen. John M. Palmer of Illinois for the Democratic nomination for the Presidency. Palmer will be 75 years old before the national convention meets. Even if he should be alive, and Thurman should again consent to play second fiddle, the combination would have the look of a very venerable kangaroo, strongest in its hind legs, but badly rattled by time. But the nomination would be one of the best that could be made, because a Democrat only ceases to be dangerous to the country when he becomes senile.

THE wife and daughter of Private Secretary Halford were on the train that was washed away at Johnstown. The train reached Johnstown at 11 o'clock and could not proceed. At 3 the conductor heard the roar of the waters, and cried to passengers to fly to the hills for their lives. Mrs. Halford got out of the car safely, but the daughter returned to the seat for her mother's medicine case. When she came out the water was up to her waist, and she would have been swept away if Postoffice Inspector Spangler had not caught her in his arms and brought her to land. She is now quite ill from fright and a carriage ride of forty miles.

THE Johnstown catastrophe has frightened the people of Olean, now a town of 15,000 inhabitants. The feeder for the old Genesee Valley Canal, which is now a sportsmen's paradise, is one-third larger than the late Conemaugh reservoir, and lies 782 feet higher than the town. It is said to be the largest artificial body of water in the United States. If it were to give way, which it is more likely to do at any moment that was the Conemaugh dam apparently, it would sweep away not only Olean, but Cuba, Hinsdale, Allegany, and towns farther down the Genesee valley. Ten years ago this dam burst, letting out 15 feet of water and flooding the valley for 150 miles.

GENERAL TELEGRAPH NEWS

Money for the relief of the sufferers by floods and by fire in Pennsylvania continues to be subscribed. To-day's tidings follow:

AT JOHNSTOWN TO-DAY.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., June 8.—This is the eighth day since the flood swept down the Valley of the Conemaugh, but the desolation that marked its passage is still visible in all directions. To the watchers on the mountain side all seems yet chaos and confusion, but the thousand fires in the valley show that the torch is being used to complete the work of annihilation where repair is impossible. By 8 o'clock this morning the corps of Government engineers that arrived last night had stretched a pontoon bridge across the River at Kernville. Acting in conjunction with the Pennsylvania military authorities, they are pursuing their labors at other points, and by sundown it is expected pontoon bridges will be erected at all places where the necessities of traffic demand. The day opened with a heavy rain and an early morning thunder storm. The hillside streams are filled to the banks and everything is dripping. The air is chilly and damp. The weather apparently had no effect on the people, for as soon as the early breakfast was over the thousands of workmen could be seen going to their work. While the rain is far from pleasant to the workers and the many helpers, it is certainly providential that the cool weather is continuing in order to prevent the much dreaded decomposition of the hundreds of human bodies yet unrecovered and thousands of animals that perished. The air this morning, while tainted to some extent with the fumes arising from the decaying bodies, was not near so much so as yesterday. What is needed is a strong cool breeze to sweep down through this valley to purify the air and carry away the poisonous gases. By 7 o'clock the whole valley was full of people and the scene was a most animated one. The various sections of the flooded territory were full of men busy searching for the dead and removing and burning the debris. At 8 o'clock five corpses had been taken from the mass at the stone bridge. A large force of men is now working on this part of the wreck. A most welcome arrival this morning was Dr. H. Bullen, of disinfectant fame. He brought 50 barrels more of his disinfectant. The Doctor will take charge of the disinfecting of the dangerous sections of the flooded district, notably at the stone bridge. From Bolivar to Johnstown the side tracks of the Pennsylvania Railroad are filled with cars loaded with lumber, furniture and goods and wares of all description for the sufferers.

The Cambria Iron Company's works present a busy scene to-day. Nine hundred men are at work and rapid progress is being made in clearing away the wreck. It is said the works will start in about three weeks. There is little change in the situation and everyone is working with the one end in view, to clear away the wreckage and give the people of Johnstown a chance to rebuild. About 10 o'clock the rain was over and the sun came out with its fierce June heat.

Arthur Kirk has fired a number of charges of dynamite during the day, and each time with good effect. The channels to the bridge are almost clear of debris, and each charge of dynamite has loosened large quantities of wreckage.

About 40 bodies were recovered up to 3 o'clock this afternoon. Of these only three were found at the bridge.

DUBLIN, June 8.—Lord Mayor Sexton has cabled to America £1,000 for the relief of the Johnstown sufferers.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

NEW-YORK, June 8.—President J. Edward Simmons, of the Fourth National Bank, made a report to-day showing that the amount of money paid to him, as Treasurer of the Relief Fund, amounted at the close of banking hours to-day, to $316,872, which included $52,885 sent to the bank direct. The only draft thus far made on this is one for $50,000. Subscriptions continue to come in large numbers to Mayor Grant. The total sum so far received at Mayor Chapin's office in Brooklyn is $40,504.

OSWEGO, N. Y., June 8.—The receipts of an entertainment given at the Armory by the Twenty-Ninth and Thirty-Eighth Separate Companies, N. G. S. N. Y., last night, for the benefit of the Johnstown sufferers, were about $400. A general meeting of the citizens is called for to-morrow afternoon for the purpose of raising money for the sufferers.

INCIDENTS OF THE FLOOD.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

LOCKPORT, Pa., June 8.—The people of this City are facing their troubles bravely and now have matters well in hand. The first car load of provisions reached here and was distributed yesterday. Two other car loads have since arrived. A commissary department has been opened and supplies are being issued as fast as possible. A large force of men and teams are at work removing the débris and filth from the streets and every effort possible is being made to put the City in a better sanitary condition. Reports of heavy losses sustained by farmers continue to come.

SOUTH FORK DAM, Pa., June 8.—This community is in a wild state of excitement as a result of the recent flood. The blame of the entire affair has been placed upon the South Fork Hunting and Fishing Club, and so angry are some of the people in this vicinity that trouble is feared for W. S. Boyer, Superintendent of the cottages on the Lake. Already several of the villas have been broken into and the furniture demolished. The boats have been stolen and reduced to kindling wood.

TROY, March 8.--Richard Whitehouse, Sr., an iron worker, left Cohoes for Johnstown, Pa., just before the great disaster there, and it is feared he has been lost, as all efforts to communicate with him by telegraph have proved futile.

MINOR NOTES OF THE DELUGE.

A Pittsburg paper tells this pathetic little incident which it noted at Sixth street bridge: A woman's little black and red bonnet, crushed almost out of shape, floating down the river, brought forth the remark from a white-haired old gentleman: "There goes the bonnet of some poor fellow's wife or mother; perhaps they're gone, too." Two ladies standing by, overhearing, instantly burst into tears, to the evident discomfiture of the old gentleman, who, after a grand effort to preserve his dignity, followed suit.

L. L. Smith, General Manager of the Gautier Steel Works, who has lived all his life in Johnstown, has told the Easton Free Press: "That Pennsylvania Railroad bridge did the whole damage. Had I been there I would have blown it up with dynamite had I been apprised in time of the flood that was coming. I told my wife last winter than in case of a big ice gorge against that bridge and the town was threatened with being flooded, I would blow up that bridge if I had to go to the penitentiary for it."

Vinton Welsh, standing at his front door in York, slipped off the step and was being carried down the street by the torrent, when three neighbors, at imminent risk, rescued him.

A Harrisburg paper of last evening says it will require weeks to restore the eastern portion of the City to its normal condition, and will involve the expenditure of a great sum.

At the lower end of Harrisburg bread and milk were being served at second-story windows on Tuesday from row-boats. All the houses were damp, and few had fires.

The Bush Lumber Company, of Wilmington, has an order from the Pennsylvania Railroad Company to ship at once all lumber that can be used to repair bridges.

The mother of a Jewish family in Sibletown gave birth to a child on the second floor of her residence while the waters poured into the lower story.

Decision as to "Woolen Waste."

By Telegraph to The Freeman

WASHINGTON, June 8.—The Treasury Department has rejected the appeal of the Providence Worsted Mills from the decision of the Collector of Customs at New-York, assessing duty at the rate of 60 cents per pound on certain so-called "worsted waste" which the appellants claimed to be dutiable at the rate of 10 cents per pound under the provision for "woolen waste." The United States Appraiser at New-York reports that the merchandize is not "woolen" or "worsted waste" within the decision of the Court in the case of the United States against Patton & Dobson, inasmuch as it consists almost entirely of 'broken laps, which although similar in character to broken tops, is one step further advanced in the manufacture of yarn and contains a slight admixture of ravelings.

Make the Whole World Kin.

By Cable to The Freeman.

LONDON, June 8.—The Times, commenting on the Johnstown disaster and the fire at Seattle, says: "While we may be thankful for immunity from these occasional penalties, we cannot forget, and it is satisfying to see that our countrymen have not forgotten that the Americans are our brethren, in sorrows and sufferings which make the whole world kin, and are entitled to special and active sympathy from ourselves."

The Chronicle says: "The Johnstown and Seattle disasters would appear to show that the rapidity with which our American cousins manage engineering and building operations is not always conducive to the safety of life and property when the elements attack them violently."

Visitors to the White House.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

WASHINGTON, June 8.—Among the President's callers to-day were Senators Teller and Plumb, Hon. T. E. Burton, of California; General Schenck, Representative Cheatham, M. M. Lewis and a small delegation from Virginia; John Nichols and P. B. Hawkins, of North-Carolina; John Price, of Birmingham; L. Anderson, of Kentucky; L. P. Featherstone, of Arkansas; M. S. White and P. W. Bryant, of Florida; Willard C. Block, of Iowa; James F. Drake, of Pueblo; J. T. McNary, of Indiana, and James P. Newcomb, of Texas.

An Officer's Sentence Commuted.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

WASHINGTON, June 8.—In the case of Captain George A. Armes, United States Army, retired, sentenced by General Court Martial to be dismissed from the service, the President has commuted the sentence in consideration of the good service which this officer has rendered, and of some mitigating circumstances connected with the offenses of which he was found guilty, to confinement within such limits as the Secretary of War may prescribe, and to deprivation of right to wear the uniform and insignia of his rank in the Army for a period of five years.

A Revolver Recklessly Used by a Boy.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

LOGANSPORT, Ind., June 8.—While a crowd of boys and girls were playing here on Thursday Charles Lewis handed a revolver to Charles Donaldson, and told him to shoot Catharine Gail, an eight-year-old child. Donaldson shot the girl in the face. The ball entered the right cheek and ranging upward came out near the ear.

Mandeville Again in Trouble.

By Cable to The Freeman.

LONDON, June 8.—The Public Prosecutor has ordered that another police summons be issued against Viscount Mandeville, the oldest son of the Duke of Manchester, whose bankruptcy was announced three months ago. The Viscount is charged with obtaining money under false pretenses.

Fatally Kicked While Intoxicated.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

WATERTOWN, N. Y. June 8.—Paul Grant, an old man, is said to be dying at Burrville from kicks administered by George Wilson, son of the hotel-keeper there, while Grant was intoxicated. The District Attorney has gone to take the man's deposition.

ADDRESS OF W. E. GLADSTONE.

He Says Liberals are Moving in Right Direction at a Fair Pace.

By Cable to The Freeman.

LONDON, June 8.—W. E. Gladstone addressed a Liberal meeting at Weymouth today. He said the Liberal Party was moving in the right direction and at a fair pace. He spoke in favor of limiting the length of a Parliament to four or five years. Referring to Ireland, he admitted that crime had decreased there, and attributed the improvement to recent remedial measures, to the beneficial influence of Irish Members of Parliament and the priests, and above all to the knowledge possessed by the Irish people that a large majority of the people of England sympathized with them. It remained for Englishmen to say whether they will do a further act of justice which alone would give a true and indissoluble union of the various countries comprehended under the designation of Great Britain and Ireland.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

NEW-YORK, June 8.—The Post's London special says W. E. Gladstone spoke yesterday at Ramsay bareheaded in a thunder storm.

FOR THE SEATTLE FIRE SUFFERERS.

What Governor of Pennsylvania Says to the Governor of New-York.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

HARRISBURG, Pa., June 8.—Governor Beaver has invited Governor Hill, of New-York, to join him in a proclamation to the people of New-York and Pennsylvania, instructing them to make special contributions through their churches to-morrow for the relief of the sufferers by the disastrous fire at Seattle and has suggested that these collections be immediately forwarded to a Central Committee consisting of ex-President Cleveland, Jay Gould, of New-York, and George W. Childs, of Philadelphia, to the appropriate authorities in Washington Territory for the relief of the sufferers.

THE STOCK AND MONEY MARKET.

Financial Doings on Wall-Street To-Day—The Leading Closing Quotations.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

NEW-YORK, June 8.—All the animation displayed in the stock market during the past few days seemed to have disappeared this morning, and the market was quiet with the bulk of the business confined to a few shares. Missouri Pacific and Wabash preferred each rose ¼. Chicago Gas declined a fraction and the other trusts shares were comparatively quiet. At 11 o'clock the market was dull and steady.

NEW LAWS IN THIS STATE.

THE CLAN-NA-GAEL AND DR. CRONIN.

Witness Who Refused to Tell the Name of a Presiding Officer.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

CHICAGO, June 8.—John Moss, a member of Camp No. 21, of the Clan-na-Gael, was put upon the witness stand at the Coroner's investigation into the manner of Dr. Cronin's death this morning. At a meeting subsequently to the murder a resolution was presented in this camp denouncing the deed. Moss moved that it be tabled remarking that "perhaps Dr. Cronin's removal was ordered by the Executive Committee." When called to the witness chair this morning and asked to give the name of the presiding officer of the camp he refused to do so and by order of the Coroner was taken into custody.

Pending the arrival of the Sheriff's Deputy, witness gave evidence of great mental distress and finally signified his willingness to testify. He then said the name of the presiding officer of his camp was William H. Joyce.

"When you made your motion on the Cronin resolution did you believe that the Executive Committee had the power to order the removal of any one?" queried the Coroner.

"I had not the faintest idea of the powers of the Executive Committee."

"If you had been ordered to remove any one would you have done it?"

"No, sir," said witness after a long pause.

Peter McGehan testified that he came to Chicago last February from Philadelphia. He did not say before leaving that he was going on dangerous business for the Executive Committee. He came because he had had a row with a young fellow about a girl. Dr. Cronin came up to witness on the street once and accused him of being in the City to murder him [Cronin]. Subsequently Cronin wrote witness telling him to get out of the State or he would have him arrested. Witness declared he was in Pullman on the night Cronin was murdered. Witness was taken into custody, and the inquest was adjourned.

A Cyclone in Kansas.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

A space 20 miles long by five miles wide was swept over by a cyclone. A farmer named Rogers and his family were killed, and many others are homeless. Heavy rain was followed by hail, which laid low the grain and fruit crop. In West Sedgwick County many houses and barns and acres of crops were leveled to the ground.

I BELIEVE IT YET.

I.

There's some useful information that I got
from mother dear,
One evening when I went my girl to see;
She told me I had better be tasteful in my dress,
If from bitter disappointment I'd be free.
She told that Marks Jacobs made suits the
handsomest;
That to his store was just the place to go,
That with his help I'd surely win the girl I
loved best:
I believed it, for my mother told me so

CHORUS.

She told me that a manly man should dress
in manly style,
And always like a gentleman should go;
That for this service I could trust Marks
Jacobs all the while;
I believed it, for my mother told me so.

II.

And so I went to Jacobs' store, 184 The Strand,
The next morning at the rising of the sun,
And picked me out the finest that this artist
had on hand,
And in just two days the suit complete
was done.
Then I hied me to the mansion where lived
my Katie Brown,
And her greeting was the sweetest man
can know;
She said I was the handsomest, the noblest
man in town;
I believed it, for my sweetheart told me so.

CHORUS.

She told me something better yet; she said
she would be mine,
That through this life with me she'd gladly go,
If I would wear Marks Jacobs' suits, so fitting,
neat and fine;
I believed it, for my Katie told me so.

NOTES ON NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE FREEMAN WILL RECEIVE SUBSCRIPTIONS FOR THE SUFFERERS IN PENNSYLVANIA, AND MAKE DAILY ACKNOWLEDGMENTS OF THE AMOUNTS RECEIVED. THE FREEMAN'S SUBSCRIPTION LIST WILL CLOSE NEXT MONDAY.

THE ruined Chesapeake and Ohio Canal is yet so valuable a property that two railroads are contending for its purchase. It would shorten the Baltimore and Ohio's route to the West, or it would open a direct route for the Western Maryland from the mountains and coal fields to Washington.

THE estimate of the dead at Johnstown has fallen to 6,000, with liberal allowances for those who were destroyed in the fire against the bridge. The registry of survivors has become unexpectedly and gratifyingly large. This is the first good news from the scene of the catastrophe.

ONE of the survivors at Johnstown was Mrs. H. L. Peterson. While looking yesterday for the body of a lost friend, she came to a coffin with her name and a correct description of her personal appearance upon it. As she tore the card from the coffin an officer came up to arrest her, but she soon convinced him that she was not dead.

THE loss of property by fire at Seattle is estimated by the Coast Review at $7,000,000, on which there is $2,250,000 insurance. The city is already rising out of its ashes. Seattle was at the zenith of a big boom when the fire came, and the burning out of the cheap and inflammable structures will add to the value of the property. But there is great individual loss and suffering.

ATTORNEY GENERAL TABOR has notified the Governor that he must veto the Capitol Appropriation bill as a unit, or allow all the items to stand. The total is about $370,000, out of which the Governor was anxious to save only the $56,000 to improve the sanitary condition of the building, and reject the appropriation for the grand staircase. The sanitary improvement is badly needed.

THE evidence in the Cronin inquest bore still more heavily on Alexander Sullivan yesterday. One of his letters was read, in which he denounced Cronin as his personal enemy, a perjurer, scoundrel and British spy. Luke Dillon, one of the witnesses, declared his belief that Sullivan was responsible for, if not a participant in, the Cronin murder. The country is waiting to hear of Sullivan's arrest.

GOV. BULKELEY of Connecticut has vetoed the secret ballot bill. His principal reason is that the election machinery required would be too expensive for his little state. He talks of extensive disfranchisement, bartering the entire vote of precincts, etc., but of course this is fustian. The Governor was mortified by his failure to get a majority vote last fall, and is showing the spleen of a small politician.

DEVOE, the meteorologist and weather prophet of Hackensack, predicts a great cyclone at Washington between the 15th and 17th inst. It is going to come up so suddenly that the Signal Office will not have time to predict it. The "sun spot" man of the Rochester Chronicle predicted the storm that swept away Johnstown, and has risen to fame on the ruins. So look out for DeVoe and his cyclone.

As Kansas gave 80,000 majority against free trade last fall, the managers of the state university accepted this as a condemnation of free trade in the institution, and directed Prof. Canfield to drop the subject. As he refused to do this he has been bounced, and Prof. Blackmar of the University of California has taken his place. The people will now secure the sort of instruction that they vote and pay for.

THOSE people who make a business of falling on the sidewalks or into gutters and suing the city for damages, will be interested to learn that Michael Emperor, a member of their profession in New York, has been indicted for perjury and locked in the Tombs. Emperor swore, in a suit brought against the city for an injured leg, that he had never brought suit against a railway company on a similar claim. Proof was then obtained that he had brought suit against four different street railways, and received small sums from each in settlement. He will probably retire from his noble vocation for a few years.

THE St. Louis Republic continues to boom Gen. John M. Palmer of Illinois for the Democratic nomination for the Presidency. Palmer will be 75 years old before the national convention meets. Even if he should be alive, and Thurman should again consent to play second fiddle, the combination would have the look of a very venerable kangaroo, strongest in its hind legs, but badly rattled by time. But the nomination would be one of the best that could be made, because a Democrat only ceases to be dangerous to the country when he becomes senile.

THE wife and daughter of Private Secretary Halford were on the train that was washed away at Johnstown. The train reached Johnstown at 11 o'clock and could not proceed. At 3 the conductor heard the roar of the waters, and cried to passengers to fly to the hills for their lives. Mrs. Halford got out of the car safely, but the daughter returned to the seat for her mother's medicine case. When she came out the water was up to her waist, and she would have been swept away if Postoffice Inspector Spangler had not caught her in his arms and brought her to land. She is now quite ill from fright and a carriage ride of forty miles.

THE Johnstown catastrophe has frightened the people of Olean, now a town of 15,000 inhabitants. The feeder for the old Genesee Valley Canal, which is now a sportsmen's paradise, is one-third larger than the late Conemaugh reservoir, and lies 782 feet higher than the town. It is said to be the largest artificial body of water in the United States. If it were to give way, which it is more likely to do at any moment that was the Conemaugh dam apparently, it would sweep away not only Olean, but Cuba, Hinsdale, Allegany, and towns farther down the Genesee valley. Ten years ago this dam burst, letting out 15 feet of water and flooding the valley for 150 miles.

GENERAL TELEGRAPH NEWS

Money for the relief of the sufferers by floods and by fire in Pennsylvania continues to be subscribed. To-day's tidings follow:

AT JOHNSTOWN TO-DAY.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., June 8.—This is the eighth day since the flood swept down the Valley of the Conemaugh, but the desolation that marked its passage is still visible in all directions. To the watchers on the mountain side all seems yet chaos and confusion, but the thousand fires in the valley show that the torch is being used to complete the work of annihilation where repair is impossible. By 8 o'clock this morning the corps of Government engineers that arrived last night had stretched a pontoon bridge across the River at Kernville. Acting in conjunction with the Pennsylvania military authorities, they are pursuing their labors at other points, and by sundown it is expected pontoon bridges will be erected at all places where the necessities of traffic demand. The day opened with a heavy rain and an early morning thunder storm. The hillside streams are filled to the banks and everything is dripping. The air is chilly and damp. The weather apparently had no effect on the people, for as soon as the early breakfast was over the thousands of workmen could be seen going to their work. While the rain is far from pleasant to the workers and the many helpers, it is certainly providential that the cool weather is continuing in order to prevent the much dreaded decomposition of the hundreds of human bodies yet unrecovered and thousands of animals that perished. The air this morning, while tainted to some extent with the fumes arising from the decaying bodies, was not near so much so as yesterday. What is needed is a strong cool breeze to sweep down through this valley to purify the air and carry away the poisonous gases. By 7 o'clock the whole valley was full of people and the scene was a most animated one. The various sections of the flooded territory were full of men busy searching for the dead and removing and burning the debris. At 8 o'clock five corpses had been taken from the mass at the stone bridge. A large force of men is now working on this part of the wreck. A most welcome arrival this morning was Dr. H. Bullen, of disinfectant fame. He brought 50 barrels more of his disinfectant. The Doctor will take charge of the disinfecting of the dangerous sections of the flooded district, notably at the stone bridge. From Bolivar to Johnstown the side tracks of the Pennsylvania Railroad are filled with cars loaded with lumber, furniture and goods and wares of all description for the sufferers.

The Cambria Iron Company's works present a busy scene to-day. Nine hundred men are at work and rapid progress is being made in clearing away the wreck. It is said the works will start in about three weeks. There is little change in the situation and everyone is working with the one end in view, to clear away the wreckage and give the people of Johnstown a chance to rebuild. About 10 o'clock the rain was over and the sun came out with its fierce June heat.

Arthur Kirk has fired a number of charges of dynamite during the day, and each time with good effect. The channels to the bridge are almost clear of debris, and each charge of dynamite has loosened large quantities of wreckage.

About 40 bodies were recovered up to 3 o'clock this afternoon. Of these only three were found at the bridge.

NEW-YORK, June 8.—President J. Edward Simmons, of the Fourth National Bank, made a report to-day showing that the amount of money paid to him, as Treasurer of the Relief Fund, amounted at the close of banking hours to-day, to $316,872, which included $52,885 sent to the bank direct. The only draft thus far made on this is one for $50,000. Subscriptions continue to come in large numbers to Mayor Grant. The total sum so far received at Mayor Chapin's office in Brooklyn is $40,504.

OSWEGO, N. Y., June 8.—The receipts of an entertainment given at the Armory by the Twenty-Ninth and Thirty-Eighth Separate Companies, N. G. S. N. Y., last night, for the benefit of the Johnstown sufferers, were about $400. A general meeting of the citizens is called for to-morrow afternoon for the purpose of raising money for the sufferers.

INCIDENTS OF THE FLOOD.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

LOCKPORT, Pa., June 8.—The people of this City are facing their troubles bravely and now have matters well in hand. The first car load of provisions reached here and was distributed yesterday. Two other car loads have since arrived. A commissary department has been opened and supplies are being issued as fast as possible. A large force of men and teams are at work removing the debris and filth from the streets and every effort possible is being made to put the City in a better sanitary condition. Reports of heavy losses sustained by farmers continue to come.

SOUTH FORK DAM, Pa., June 8.—This community is in a wild state of excitement as a result of the recent flood. The blame of the entire affair has been placed upon the South Fork Hunting and Fishing Club, and so angry are some of the people in this vicinity that trouble is feared for W. S. Boyer, Superintendent of the cottages on the Lake. Already several of the villas have been broken into and the furniture demolished. The boats have been stolen and reduced to kindling wood.

TROY, March 8.--Richard Whitehouse, Sr., an iron worker, left Cohoes for Johnstown, Pa., just before the great disaster there, and it is feared he has been lost, as all efforts to communicate with him by telegraph have proved futile.

MINOR NOTES OF THE DELUGE.

A Pittsburg paper tells this pathetic little incident which it noted at Sixth street bridge: A woman's little black and red bonnet, crushed almost out of shape, floating down the river, brought forth the remark from a white-haired old gentleman: "There goes the bonnet of some poor fellow's wife or mother; perhaps they're gone, too." Two ladies standing by, overhearing, instantly burst into tears, to the evident discomfiture of the old gentleman, who, after a grand effort to preserve his dignity, followed suit.

L. L. Smith, General Manager of the Gautier Steel Works, who has lived all his life in Johnstown, has told the Easton Free Press: "That Pennsylvania Railroad bridge did the whole damage. Had I been there I would have blown it up with dynamite had I been apprised in time of the flood that was coming. I told my wife last winter than in case of a big ice gorge against that bridge and the town was threatened with being flooded, I would blow up that bridge if I had to go to the penitentiary for it."

Vinton Welsh, standing at his front door in York, slipped off the step and was being carried down the street by the torrent, when three neighbors, at imminent risk, rescued him.

A Harrisburg paper of last evening says it will require weeks to restore the eastern portion of the City to its normal condition, and will involve the expenditure of a great sum.

At the lower end of Harrisburg bread and milk were being served at second-story windows on Tuesday from row-boats. All the houses were damp, and few had fires.

The Bush Lumber Company, of Wilmington, has an order from the Pennsylvania Railroad Company to ship at once all lumber that can be used to repair bridges.

The mother of a Jewish family in Sibletown gave birth to a child on the second floor of her residence while the waters poured into the lower story.

Decision as to "Woolen Waste."

By Telegraph to The Freeman

WASHINGTON, June 8.—The Treasury Department has rejected the appeal of the Providence Worsted Mills from the decision of the Collector of Customs at New-York, assessing duty at the rate of 60 cents per pound on certain so-called "worsted waste" which the appellants claimed to be dutiable at the rate of 10 cents per pound under the provision for "woolen waste." The United States Appraiser at New-York reports that the merchandize is not "woolen" or "worsted waste" within the decision of the Court in the case of the United States against Patton & Dobson, inasmuch as it consists almost entirely of broken laps, which although similar in character to broken tops, is one step further advanced in the manufacture of yarn and contains a slight admixture of ravelings.

Make the Whole World Kin.

By Cable to The Freeman.

LONDON, June 8.—The Times, commenting on the Johnstown disaster and the fire at Seattle, says: "While we may be thankful for immunity from these occasional penalties, we cannot forget, and it is satisfying to see that our countrymen have not forgotten that the Americans are our brethren, in sorrows and sufferings which make the whole world kin, and are entitled to special and active sympathy from ourselves."

The Chronicle says: "The Johnstown and Seattle disasters would appear to show that the rapidity with which our American cousins manage engineering and building operations is not always conducive to the safety of life and property when the elements attack them violently."

An Officer's Sentence Commuted.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

WASHINGTON, June 8.—In the case of Captain George A. Armes, United States Army, retired, sentenced by General Court Martial to be dismissed from the service, the President has commuted the sentence in consideration of the good service which this officer has rendered, and of some mitigating circumstances connected with the offenses of which he was found guilty, to confinement within such limits as the Secretary of War may prescribe, and to deprivation of right to wear the uniform and insignia of his rank in the Army for a period of five years.

A Revolver Recklessly Used by a Boy.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

LOGANSPORT, Ind., June 8.—While a crowd of boys and girls were playing here on Thursday Charles Lewis handed a revolver to Charles Donaldson, and told him to shoot Catharine Gall, an eight-year-old child. Donaldson shot the girl in the face. The ball entered the right cheek and ranging upward came out near the ear.

ADDRESS OF W. E. GLADSTONE.

He Says Liberals are Moving in Right Direction at a Fair Pace.

By Cable to The Freeman.

LONDON, June 8.—W. E. Gladstone addressed a Liberal meeting at Weymouth today. He said the Liberal Party was moving in the right direction and at a fair pace. He spoke in favor of limiting the length of a Parliament to four or five years. Referring to Ireland, he admitted that crime had decreased there, and attributed the improvement to recent remedial measures, to the beneficial influence of Irish Members of Parliament and the priests, and above all to the knowledge possessed by the Irish people that a large majority of the people of England sympathized with them. It remained for Englishmen to say whether they will do a further act of justice which alone would give a true and indissoluble union of the various countries comprehended under the designation of Great Britain and Ireland.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

NEW-YORK, June 8.—The Post's London special says W. E. Gladstone spoke yesterday at Ramsay bareheaded in a thunder storm.

NEW LAWS IN THIS STATE.

THE CLAN-NA-GAEL AND DR. CRONIN.

Witness Who Refused to Tell the Name of a Presiding Officer.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

CHICAGO, June 8.—John Moss, a member of Camp No. 21, of the Clan-na-Gael, was put upon the witness stand at the Coroner's investigation into the manner of Dr. Cronin's death this morning. At a meeting subsequently to the murder a resolution was presented in this camp denouncing the deed. Moss moved that it be tabled remarking that "perhaps Dr. Cronin's removal was ordered by the Executive Committee." When called to the witness chair this morning and asked to give the name of the presiding officer of the camp he refused to do so and by order of the Coroner was taken into custody.

Pending the arrival of the Sheriff's Deputy, witness gave evidence of great mental distress and finally signified his willingness to testify. He then said the name of the presiding officer of his camp was William H. Joyce.

"When you made your motion on the Cronin resolution did you believe that the Executive Committee had the power to order the removal of any one?" queried the Coroner.

"I had not the faintest idea of the powers of the Executive Committee."

"If you had been ordered to remove any one would you have done it?"

"No, sir," said witness after a long pause.

Peter McGehan testified that he came to Chicago last February from Philadelphia. He did not say before leaving that he was going on dangerous business for the Executive Committee. He came because he had had a row with a young fellow about a girl. Dr. Cronin came up to witness on the street once and accused him of being in the City to murder him [Cronin]. Subsequently Cronin wrote witness telling him to get out of the State or he would have him arrested. Witness declared he was in Pullman on the night Cronin was murdered. Witness was taken into custody, and the inquest was adjourned.

I BELIEVE IT YET.

I.

There's some useful information that I got
from mother dear,
One evening when I went my girl to see;
She told me I had better be tasteful in my
dress,
If from bitter disappointment I'd be free.
She told that Marks Jacobs made suits the
handsomest;
That to his store was just the place to go,
That with his help I'd surely win the girl I
loved best:
I believed it, for my mother told me so

CHORUS.

She told me that a manly man should dress
in manly style,
And always like a gentleman should go;
That for this service I could trust Marks
Jacobs all the while;
I believed it, for my mother told me so.

II.

And so I went to Jacobs' store, 184 The Strand,
The next morning at the rising of the sun,
And picked me out the finest that this artist
had on hand,
And in just two days the suit complete
was done.
Then I hied me to the mansion where lived
my Katie Brown,
And her greeting was the sweetest man
can know;
She said I was the handsomest, the noblest
man in town;
I believed it, for my sweetheart told me so.

CHORUS.

She told me something better yet; she said
she would be mine,
That through this life with me she'd gladly go,
If I would wear Marks Jacobs' suits, so fitting,
neat and fine;
I believed it, for my Katie told me so.

NO MORE STRIKES FOR ARTHUR.

We believe that Chief Arthur of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers is a foreigner by birth, but he has a good deal of what the Yankees call "horse sense," and he appears also to have caught on to the American idea in regard to labor matters. At the recent meeting of the Association in Chicago he made a speech in which he declared: "Under no circumstances which I can conceive shall I ever sanction another strike." He said in continuation that he was opposed to strikes on general principles, and then told his society that "to strike would be practical suicide, for owing to the inexorable laws of supply and demand and the large number of unemployed engineers in the country it would take but an exceedingly short space of time to fill our places."

It is a great point gained for peace and for the welfare of labor and business when the leader of the greatest labor organization in the United States gets this bit of common sense into his head and finds the courage to proclaim it. Chief Arthur is a candidate for re-election, and knows that he puts his success in peril by talking in this way to a great mass of men, many of them ignorant and full of the bigoted European idea that the normal relation of labor to the capital that employs it is changeless and implacable antagonism, emphasized periodically by strikes, violence and the destruction of property. The truth may not get into the brains of a majority of his society in time to save him from defeat, but he has cast in the leaven among them, and it is sure to get in its work sooner or later. A few more defeats, such as have overtaken the recent great strikes, will be a powerful educational process in the course that the Chief has marked out. It will encourage employers to stouter resistance against a proceeding always more or less criminal in its results, and which except for the demagogues who rule in our law-making bodies, would be punished like other conspiracies. The strike, the boycott and the lockout are all anti-American in their spirit and operation, and have no justification or excuse under a government in which every man is free. Labor organizations are permissible and necessary for the well-being of the workingmen, but they will be more useful when their efforts are directed to the better education of their members, to economic discussions, to profitable investments for their savings, and especially to the assertion of the great principle that every man's labor is his own property, to be disposed of by himself at any price and in any market that he may prefer, and must never be put at the disposal or subjected to the dictation of a society in which the incompetents and the rogues are in the majority, and agitators and blatherskites get the offices.

A TRUCE BETWEEN MURPHY AND HILL.

The contract for the state printing, worth $160,000, has been given by order of Gov. Hill to "James B. Lyon & Co." This firm name is the one under which Edward Murphy, Jr., figures in his relations to the printing business. The firm takes the contract and Murphy takes the swag. The Governor has also appointed Michael Conway of Troy Agent for Discharged Convicts. The Governor has twice advised the abolition of this office as useless. The appropriation for it is $7,500 a year, of which the officer takes $3,500 for salary and disburses $4,000 among the convicts. Conway is one of Murphy's henchmen, and has been keeper of the Troy jail.

These things are expected to placate Murphy, who has recently been very angry at Hill. The Tribune's Albany correspondent states that Murphy had claimed the office of Bank Superintendent for Charles R. DeFreest of Troy, that of Superintendent of Public Buildings for his father-in-law, Michael Delahanty of Albany, and that of Superintendent of Insurance for T. C. Callicott of Albany, one of his personal tools. The places in the Banking and Insurance Departments Mr. Hill could not deliver because the Senate refused to confirm DeFreest and Callicott. The appointment of Burnham instead of Delahanty to succeed Andrews was a cool piece of treachery on the part of Hill toward the Troy boss.

The people of Troy who know DeFreest will not regret that he has been left out of the Banking Department. He is destitute of both capacity and conscience, and has earned the friendship of Murphy by personal services of a sort that would not bear repetition in a decent journal. In some positions which he has held he has been accused of financial crookedness, and his indictment was once seriously considered. He once held a comfortable position on a Republican newspaper, and was allowed to depart when detected in listening at the keyhole of the editor's sanctum and communicating political secrets obtained in this manner to Murphy. But Murphy is faithful to his servants, and stands by them always, no matter how bankrupt in character and position they may have become. Callicott's errors are subjects of older history, and the veil of silence has long been charitably drawn over them. But an exploration of his record as a revenue officer of the federal goverument would convince a great many people that the Senate made no mistake in refusing to confirm him.

LAW FOR THE GHOULS.

There is not much patience anywhere in Pennsylvania with those who rob the dead or the suffering survivors. The stories of lynchings at Johnstown have been told till they are familiar to every ear, and it is only here and there a nature of extremely fine and sensitive moral fibre that refuses to justify them. And wherever the law takes hold of an offender of this class, it acts with the promptness of Judge Lynch, though with more respect to legal forms.

In Philadelphia last Wednesday a good coat and vest were presented by a gentleman to some policemen in charge of a patrol wagon which was engaged in gathering supplies for Johnstown. One of these officers, named Capehart, was left alone with the wagon for a few minutes after its return to the station, and stole the coat and vest and carried them home. He was at once suspected, and after his return two of the other officers went to his house and told his brother that they had been sent for the coat and vest that Capehart had left there. The brother unsuspectingly brought out the goods. The Mayor heard the story the next morning, and told the Police Superintendent to have Capehart arrested at once. At 12 o'clock noon on Thursday he was arrested. At one o'clock he had been indicted by the grand jury. He was at once put on trial and pleaded not guilty, the witnesses gave their evidence, at 2:05 o'clock a verdict of guilty was rendered, the sentence of 6 months in the penitentiary was pronounced by Judge Bregy, the prison van was waiting at the door, and at 2:30 Capehart was within the prison walls, clothed in a convict's garb. The whole proceeding from the arrest till the closing of the prison doors upon him had occupied only two hours and a half. Pennsylvania is getting into a condition of temper that is very dangerous to ghouls.

PUBLIC OPINION.

Does Governor Hill think that the road to the White House leads through the saloons of the country?—Albany Express.

The mugwumps are now objecting to the removal of postmasters for "offensive partisanship." Why, you dear old grannies, the very term was coined by your adored Grover Cleveland.—New York Press.

As long as bibles cost fifteen cents each and yellow-backed novels five, the young idea is taught to shoot redskins six days in the week in preference to learning the commandments.—Wichita Journal.

A Virginia newspaper says that "Lincoln positively violated his oath of office when he set the negroes free." Pity that Lincoln is beyond reach. John Wilkes Booth and his Southern friends were premature. Their haste seems to have left this Virginia newspaper to repent at leisure.—Buffalo Express.

Mr. Smalley, the London correspondent of the New York Tribune, declares that John C. New can easily save $100,000 from the fees of the Consul General's office in four years. This is just $30,000 more than the total salary of our Minister to England will be during the same time, and out of that the latter will not be able to save a cent. A peculiar apportionment of pay, isn't it?—Utica Observer.

There is just one thing, and only one, that can be said in Gov. Hill's favor in his course to favor the saloons under all circumstances and at all hazards. It is a good trait for even a bad man to be true when he gets into office to the friends who elected him. No one can afford to believe in the honesty of a candidate or an officer who sets up pretentions of being better than his party.—Binghamton Republican.

The South is taking the lead as the law-and-order section. Our Sunday laws are the strictest in the world. There is lesss liquor consumed in every Southern state than there is in Maine. We send gamblers and "pistol toters" to the chain-gang. Occasionally we lynch a murderer, but our Northern brethren do that also, when they do not turn him loose on the community, which is their usual way.—Atlanta Constitution.

A SCURRILOUS GOVERNOR.

A Way-Down-East Opinion of David B. Hill.

[From the Springfield Union]

Gov. Hill's veto of the excise bill passed by the New York Legislature was fully expected, and it is very probable that no liquor bill could be drawn which would be approved by him, if his friends, the liquor dealers, discovered that it interfered in any way with their interests. But Gov. Hill was not satisfied with standing on his dignity—supposing that he has any—and stating his objections in a business-like way, but took occasion to make a scurrilous attack upon the Republicans of the Legislature who are now where they cannot "talk back." This man who aspires to become President of the United States writes state papers which reek with the offensive and vulgar language of the saloon or the Democratic ward caucus. He declares regarding the excise bill that "hyprocrisy is stamped on nearly every page and line of this measure," and charges his opponents, the temperance men of the Legislature, with "shameful violation of official oaths," "false pretenses," "flimsy pretexts" and "preposterous claims," and declares that this and other bills were made "defective, harsh and unreasonable" for the purpose of having them vetoed and thus putting him "in a hole." These are only a few examples of the way in which this Governor of a great state uses his powers of vituperation in his official utterances.

It is possible that this man may be able to control the Democratic party in his own state and so foist his pretentions upon the national party and secure the nomination for the Presidency. But we trust the day will never come when it will be possible for such a man to reach the highest place in the gift of the nation.

PIMPLES TO SCROFULA.

A Positive Cure for every Skin, Scalp and Blood Disease except Ichthyosis.

Psoriasis 8 Years. Head, Arms and Breast A Solid Scab. Back Covered with Sores. Best Doctors and Medicines Fail. Cured By Cuticura Remedies at a Cost of $3.75.

I have used the Cuticura Remedies with the best results. I used two bottles of the Cuticura Resolvent, three boxes of Cuticura, and one cake of Cuticura Soap, and am cured of a terrible skin and scalp disease known as psoriasis. I had it eight years. It would get better and worse at times. Sometimes my head would be a solid scap, and was at the time I began the use of the Cuticura Remedies. My arms were covered with scabs from my elbows to shoulders, my breast was almost one solid scab, and my back covered with sores varying in size from a peny to a dollar. I had doctored with all the best doctors with no relief, and used many different medicines without effect. My case was hereditary, and, I began to think, incurable, but it began to heal from the first application of Cuticura.

ARTHUR RUSSELL, Deshler, Ohio.

Skin Disease 6 Years Cured.

I am thankful to say that I have used the Cuticura Remedies for about eight months with great success, and consider myself cured of salt rheum, from which I have suffered for six years. I tried a number of medicines and two of the best doctors in the country, but I found nothing that would effect a cure until I used your remedies.

NO MORE STRIKES FOR ARTHUR.

We believe that Chief Arthur of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers is a foreigner by birth, but he has a good deal of what the Yankees call "horse sense," and he appears also to have caught on to the American idea in regard to labor matters. At the recent meeting of the Association in Chicago he made a speech in which he declared: "Under no circumstances which I can conceive shall I ever sanction another strike." He said in continuation that he was opposed to strikes on general principles, and then told his society that "to strike would be practical suicide, for owing to the inexorable laws of supply and demand and the large number of unemployed engineers in the country it would take but an exceedingly short space of time to fill our places."

It is a great point gained for peace and for the welfare of labor and business when the leader of the greatest labor organization in the United States gets this bit of common sense into his head and finds the courage to proclaim it. Chief Arthur is a candidate for re-election, and knows that he puts his success in peril by talking in this way to a great mass of men, many of them ignorant and full of the bigoted European idea that the normal relation of labor to the capital that employs it is changeless and implacable antagonism, emphasized periodically by strikes, violence and the destruction of property. The truth may not get into the brains of a majority of his society in time to save him from defeat, but he has cast in the leaven among them, and it is sure to get in its work sooner or later. A few more defeats, such as have overtaken the recent great strikes, will be a powerful educational process in the course that the Chief has marked out. It will encourage employers to stouter resistance against a proceeding always more or less criminal in its results, and which except for the demagogues who rule in our law-making bodies, would be punished like other conspiracies. The strike, the boycott and the lockout are all anti-American in their spirit and operation, and have no justification or excuse under a government in which every man is free. Labor organizations are permissible and necessary for the well-being of the workingmen, but they will be more useful when their efforts are directed to the better education of their members, to economic discussions, to profitable investments for their savings, and especially to the assertion of the great principle that every man's labor is his own property, to be disposed of by himself at any price and in any market that he may prefer, and must never be put at the disposal or subjected to the dictation of a society in which the incompetents and the rogues are in the majority, and agitators and blatherskites get the offices.

A TRUCE BETWEEN MURPHY AND HILL.

The contract for the state printing, worth $160,000, has been given by order of Gov. Hill to "James B. Lyon & Co." This firm name is the one under which Edward Murphy, Jr., figures in his relations to the printing business. The firm takes the contract and Murphy takes the swag. The Governor has also appointed Michael Conway of Troy Agent for Discharged Convicts. The Governor has twice advised the abolition of this office as useless. The appropriation for it is $7,500 a year, of which the officer takes $3,500 for salary and disburses $4,000 among the convicts. Conway is one of Murphy's henchmen, and has been keeper of the Troy jail.

These things are expected to placate Murphy, who has recently been very angry at Hill. The Tribune's Albany correspondent states that Murphy had claimed the office of Bank Superintendent for Charles R. DeFreest of Troy, that of Superintendent of Public Buildings for his father-in-law, Michael Delahanty of Albany, and that of Superintendent of Insurance for T. C. Callicott of Albany, one of his personal tools. The places in the Banking and Insurance Departments Mr. Hill could not deliver because the Senate refused to confirm DeFreest and Callicott. The appointment of Burnham instead of Delahanty to succeed Andrews was a cool piece of treachery on the part of Hill toward the Troy boss.

The people of Troy who know DeFreest will not regret that he has been left out of the Banking Department. He is destitute of both capacity and conscience, and has earned the friendship of Murphy by personal services of a sort that would not bear repetition in a decent journal. In some positions which he has held he has been accused of financial crookedness, and his indictment was once seriously considered. He once held a comfortable position on a Republican newspaper, and was allowed to depart when detected in listening at the keyhole of the editor's sanctum and communicating political secrets obtained in this manner to Murphy. But Murphy is faithful to his servants, and stands by them always, no matter how bankrupt in character and position they may have become. Callicott's errors are subjects of older history, and the veil of silence has long been charitably drawn over them. But an exploration of his record as a revenue officer of the federal goverument would convince a great many people that the Senate made no mistake in refusing to confirm him.

LAW FOR THE GHOULS.

There is not much patience anywhere in Pennsylvania with those who rob the dead or the suffering survivors. The stories of lynchings at Johnstown have been told till they are familiar to every ear, and it is only here and there a nature of extremely fine and sensitive moral fibre that refuses to justify them. And wherever the law takes hold of an offender of this class, it acts with the promptness of Judge Lynch, though with more respect to legal forms.

In Philadelphia last Wednesday a good coat and vest were presented by a gentleman to some policemen in charge of a patrol wagon which was engaged in gathering supplies for Johnstown. One of these officers, named Capehart, was left alone with the wagon for a few minutes after its return to the station, and stole the coat and vest and carried them home. He was at once suspected, and after his return two of the other officers went to his house and told his brother that they had been sent for the coat and vest that Capehart had left there. The brother unsuspectingly brought out the goods. The Mayor heard the story the next morning, and told the Police Superintendent to have Capehart arrested at once. At 12 o'clock noon on Thursday he was arrested. At one o'clock he had been indicted by the grand jury. He was at once put on trial and pleaded not guilty, the witnesses gave their evidence, at 2:05 o'clock a verdict of guilty was rendered, the sentence of 6 months in the penitentiary was pronounced by Judge Bregy, the prison van was waiting at the door, and at 2:30 Capehart was within the prison walls, clothed in a convict's garb. The whole proceeding from the arrest till the closing of the prison doors upon him had occupied only two hours and a half. Pennsylvania is getting into a condition of temper that is very dangerous to ghouls.

PUBLIC OPINION.

Does Governor Hill think that the road to the White House leads through the saloons of the country ?—Albany Express.

The mugwumps are now objecting to the removal of postmasters for "offensive partisanship." Why, you dear old grannies, the very term was coined by your adored Grover Cleveland.—New York Press.

As long as bibles cost fifteen cents each and yellow-backed novels five, the young idea is taught to shoot redskins six days in the week in preference to learning the commandments.—Wichita Journal.

A Virginia newspaper says that "Lincoln positively violated his oath of office when he set the negroes free." Pity that Lincoln is beyond reach. John Wilkes Booth and his Southern friends were premature. Their haste seems to have left this Virginia newspaper to repent at leisure.—Buffalo Express.

Mr. Smalley, the London correspondent of the New York Tribune, declares that John C. New can easily save $100,000 from the fees of the Consul General's office in four years. This is just $30,000 more than the total salary of our Minister to England will be during the same time, and out of that the latter will not be able to save a cent. A peculiar apportionment of pay, isn't it?—Utica Observer.

There is just one thing, and only one, that can be said in Gov. Hill's favor in his course to favor the saloons under all circumstances and at all hazards. It is a good trait for even a bad man to be true when he gets into office to the friends who elected him. No one can afford to believe in the honesty of a candidate or an officer who sets up pretentions of being better than his party.—Binghamton Republican.

The South is taking the lead as the law-and-order section. Our Sunday laws are the strictest in the world. There is lesss liquor consumed in every Southern state than there is in Maine. We send gamblers and "pistol toters" to the chain-gang. Occasionally we lynch a murderer, but our Northern brethren do that also, when they do not turn him loose on the community, which is their usual way.—Atlanta Constitution.

A SCURRILOUS GOVERNOR.

A Way-Down-East Opinion of David B. Hill.

[From the Springfield Union]

Gov. Hill's veto of the excise bill passed by the New York Legislature was fully expected, and it is very probable that no liquor bill could be drawn which would be approved by him, if his friends, the liquor dealers, discovered that it interfered in any way with their interests. But Gov. Hill was not satisfied with standing on his dignity—supposing that he has any—and stating his objections in a business-like way, but took occasion to make a scurrilous attack upon the Republicans of the Legislature who are now where they cannot "talk back." This man who aspires to become President of the United States writes state papers which reek with the offensive and vulgar language of the saloon or the Democratic ward caucus. He declares regarding the excise bill that "hypocrisy is stamped on nearly every page and line of this measure," and charges his opponents, the temperance men of the Legislature, with "shameful violation of official oaths," "false pretenses," "flimsy pretexts" and "preposterous claims," and declares that this and other bills were made "defective, harsh and unreasonable" for the purpose of having them vetoed and thus putting him "in a hole." These are only a few examples of the way in which this Governor of a great state uses his powers of vituperation in his official utterances.

It is possible that this man may be able to control the Democratic party in his own state and so foist his pretentions upon the national party and secure the nomination for the Presidency. But we trust the day will never come when it will be possible for such a man to reach the highest place in the gift of the nation.

Psoriasis 8 Years. Head, Arms and Breast A Solid Scab. Back Covered with Sores. Best Doctors and Medicines Fail. Cured By Cuticura Remedies at a Cost of $3.75.

I have used the Cuticura Remedies with the best results. I used two bottles of the Cuticura Resolvent, three boxes of Cuticura, and one cake of Cuticura Soap, and am cured of a terrible skin and scalp disease known as psoriasis. I had it eight years. It would get better and worse at times. Sometimes my head would be a solid scap, and was at the time I began the use of the Cuticura Remedies. My arms were covered with scabs from my elbows to shoulders, my breast was almost one solid scab, and my back covered with sores varying in size from a peny to a dollar. I had doctered with all the best doctors with no relief, and used many different medicines without effect. My case was hereditary, and, I began to think, incurable, but it began to heal from the first application of Cuticura.
ARTHUR RUSSELL, Deshler, Ohio.

Skin Disease 6 Years Cured.

I am thankful to say that I have used the Cuticura Remedies for about eight months with great success, and consider myself cured of salt rheum, from which I have suffered for six years. I tried a number of medicines and two of the best doctors in the country, but I found nothing that would effect a cure until I used your remedies.

NO MORE STRIKES FOR ARTHUR.

We believe that Chief Arthur of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers is a foreigner by birth, but he has a good deal of what the Yankees call "horse sense," and he appears also to have caught on to the American idea in regard to labor matters. At the recent meeting of the Association in Chicago he made a speech in which he declared: "Under no circumstances which I can conceive shall I ever sanction another strike." He said in continuation that he was opposed to strikes on general principles, and then told his society that "to strike would be practical suicide, for owing to the inexorable laws of supply and demand and the large number of unemployed engineers in the country it would take but an exceedingly short space of time to fill our places."

It is a great point gained for peace and for the welfare of labor and business when the leader of the greatest labor organization in the United States gets this bit of common sense into his head and finds the courage to proclaim it. Chief Arthur is a candidate for re-election, and knows that he puts his success in peril by talking in this way to a great mass of men, many of them ignorant and full of the bigoted European idea that the normal relation of labor to the capital that employs it is changeless and implacable antagonism, emphasized periodically by strikes, violence and the destruction of property. The truth may not get into the brains of a majority of his society in time to save him from defeat, but he has cast in the leaven among them, and it is sure to get in its work sooner or later. A few more defeats, such as have overtaken the recent great strikes, will be a powerful educational process in the course that the Chief has marked out. It will encourage employers to stouter resistance against a proceeding always more or less criminal in its results, and which except for the demagogues who rule in our law-making bodies, would be punished like other conspiracies. The strike, the boycott and the lockout are all anti-American in their spirit and operation, and have no justification or excuse under a government in which every man is free. Labor organizations are permissible and necessary for the well-being of the workingmen, but they will be more useful when their efforts are directed to the better education of their members, to economic discussions, to profitable investments for their savings, and especially to the assertion of the great principle that every man's labor is his own property, to be disposed of by himself at any price and in any market that he may prefer, and must never be put at the disposal or subjected to the dictation of a society in which the incompetents and the rogues are in the majority, and agitators and blatherskites get the offices.

A TRUCE BETWEEN MURPHY AND HILL.

The contract for the state printing, worth $160,000, has been given by order of Gov. Hill to "James B. Lyon & Co." This firm name is the one under which Edward Murphy, Jr., figures in his relations to the printing business. The firm takes the contract and Murphy takes the swag. The Governor has also appointed Michael Conway of Troy Agent for Discharged Convicts. The Governor has twice advised the abolition of this office as useless. The appropriation for it is $7,500 a year, of which the officer takes $3,500 for salary and disburses $4,000 among the convicts. Conway is one of Murphy's henchmen, and has been keeper of the Troy jail.

These things are expected to placate Murphy, who has recently been very angry at Hill. The Tribune's Albany correspondent states that Murphy had claimed the office of Bank Superintendent for Charles R. DeFreest of Troy, that of Superintendent of Public Buildings for his father-in-law, Michael Delahanty of Albany, and that of Superintendent of Insurance for T. C. Callicott of Albany, one of his personal tools. The places in the Banking and Insurance Departments Mr. Hill could not deliver because the Senate refused to confirm DeFreest and Callicott. The appointment of Burnham instead of Delahanty to succeed Andrews was a cool piece of treachery on the part of Hill toward the Troy boss.

The people of Troy who know DeFreest will not regret that he has been left out of the Banking Department. He is destitute of both capacity and conscience, and has earned the friendship of Murphy by personal services of a sort that would not bear repetition in a decent journal. In some positions which he has held he has been accused of financial crookedness, and his indictment was once seriously considered. He once held a comfortable position on a Republican newspaper, and was allowed to depart when detected in listening at the keyhole of the editor's sanctum and communicating political secrets obtained in this manner to Murphy. But Murphy is faithful to his servants, and stands by them always, no matter how bankrupt in character and position they may have become. Callicott's errors are subjects of older history, and the veil of silence has long been charitably drawn over them. But an exploration of his record as a revenue officer of the federal government would convince a great many people that the Senate made no mistake in refusing to confirm him.

LAW FOR THE GHOULS.

There is not much patience anywhere in Pennsylvania with those who rob the dead or the suffering survivors. The stories of lynchings at Johnstown have been told till they are familiar to every ear, and it is only here and there a nature of extremely fine and sensitive moral fibre that refuses to justify them. And wherever the law takes hold of an offender of this class, it acts with the promptness of Judge Lynch, though with more respect to legal forms.

In Philadelphia last Wednesday a good coat and vest were presented by a gentleman to some policemen in charge of a patrol wagon which was engaged in gathering supplies for Johnstown. One of these officers, named Capehart, was left alone with the wagon for a few minutes after its return to the station, and stole the coat and vest and carried them home. He was at once suspected, and after his return two of the other officers went to his house and told his brother that they had been sent for the coat and vest that Capehart had left there. The brother unsuspectingly brought out the goods. The Mayor heard the story the next morning, and told the Police Superintendent to have Capehart arrested at once. At 12 o'clock noon on Thursday he was arrested. At one o'clock he had been indicted by the grand jury. He was at once put on trial and pleaded not guilty, the witnesses gave their evidence, at 2:05 o'clock a verdict of guilty was rendered, the sentence of 6 months in the penitentiary was pronounced by Judge Bregy, the prison van was waiting at the door, and at 2:30 Capehart was within the prison walls, clothed in a convict's garb. The whole proceeding from the arrest till the closing of the prison doors upon him had occupied only two hours and a half. Pennsylvania is getting into a condition of temper that is very dangerous to ghouls.

PUBLIC OPINION.

Does Governor Hill think that the road to the White House leads through the saloons of the country?—Albany Express.

The mugwumps are now objecting to the removal of postmasters for "offensive partisanship." Why, you dear old grannies, the very term was coined by your adored Grover Cleveland.—New York Press.

As long as bibles cost fifteen cents each and yellow-backed novels five, the young idea is taught to shoot redskins six days in the week in preference to learning the commandments.—Wichita Journal.

A Virginia newspaper says that "Lincoln positively violated his oath of office when he set the negroes free." Pity that Lincoln is beyond reach. John Wilkes Booth and his Southern friends were premature. Their haste seems to have left this Virginia newspaper to repent at leisure.—Buffalo Express.

Mr. Smalley, the London correspondent of the New York Tribune, declares that John C. New can easily save $100,000 from the fees of the Consul General's office in four years. This is just $30,000 more than the total salary of our Minister to England will be during the same time, and out of that the latter will not be able to save a cent. A peculiar apportionment of pay, isn't it?—Utica Observer.

There is just one thing, and only one, that can be said in Gov. Hill's favor in his course to favor the saloons under all circumstances and at all hazards. It is a good trait for even a bad man to be true when he gets into office to the friends who elected him. No one can afford to believe in the honesty of a candidate or an officer who sets up pretentions of being better than his party.—Binghamton Republican.

The South is taking the lead as the law-and-order section. Our Sunday laws are the strictest in the world. There is lesss liquor consumed in every Southern state than there is in Maine. We send gamblers and "pistol toters" to the chain-gang. Occasionally we lynch a murderer, but our Northern brethren do that also, when they do not turn him loose on the community, which is their usual way.—Atlanta Constitution.

A SCURRILOUS GOVERNOR.

A Way-Down-East Opinion of David B. Hill.

[From the Springfield Union]

Gov. Hill's veto of the excise bill passed by the New York Legislature was fully expected, and it is very probable that no liquor bill could be drawn which would be approved by him, if his friends, the liquor dealers, discovered that it interfered in any way with their interests. But Gov. Hill was not satisfied with standing on his dignity—supposing that he has any—and stating his objections in a business-like way, but took occasion to make a scurrilous attack upon the Republicans of the Legislature who are now where they cannot "talk back." This man who aspires to become President of the United States writes state papers which reek with the offensive and vulgar language of the saloon or the Democratic ward caucus. He declares regarding the excise bill that "hyprocrisy is stamped on nearly every page and line of this measure," and charges his opponents, the temperance men of the Legislature, with "shameful violation of official oaths," "false pretenses," "flimsy pretexts" and "preposterous claims," and declares that this and other bills were made "defective, harsh and unreasonable" for the purpose of having them vetoed and thus putting him "in a hole." These are only a few examples of the way in which this Governor of a great state uses his powers of vituperation in his official utterances.

It is possible that this man may be able to control the Democratic party in his own state and so foist his pretentions upon the national party and secure the nomination for the Presidency. But we trust the day will never come when it will be possible for such a man to reach the highest place in the gift of the nation.

PIMPLES TO SCROFULA.

A Positive Cure for every Skin, Scalp and Blood Disease except Ichthyosis.

Psoriasis 8 Years. Head, Arms and Breast A Solid Scab. Back Covered with Sores. Best Doctors and Medicines Fail. Cured By Cuticura Remedies at a Cost of $3.75.

I have used the Cuticura Remedies with the best results. I used two bottles of the Cuticura Resolvent, three boxes of Cuticura, and one cake of Cuticura Soap, and am cured of a terrible skin and scalp disease known as psoriasis. I had it eight years. It would get better and worse at times. Sometimes my head would be a solid scap, and was at the time I began the use of the Cuticura Remedies. My arms were covered with scabs from my elbows to shoulders, my breast was almost one solid scab, and my back covered with sores varying in size from a peny to a dollar. I had doctered with all the best doctors with no relief, and used many different medicines without effect. My case was hereditary, and, I began to think, incurable, but it began to heal from the first application of Cuticura.

ARTHUR RUSSELL, Deshler, Ohio.

Skin Disease 6 Years Cured.

I am thankful to say that I have used the Cuticura Remedies for about eight months with great success, and consider myself cured of salt rheum, from which I have suffered for six years. I tried a number of medicines and two of the best doctors in the country, but I found nothing that would effect a cure until I used your remedies.

MRS. A. MCCLAFIN, Morette, Mo.

The Worst Case of Scrofula Cured.

We have been selling your Cuticura Remedies for years, and have the first complaint yet to receive from a purchaser. One of the worst cases of Scrofula I ever saw was cured by the use of five bottles of Cuticura Resolvent, Cuticura and Cuticura Soap.

SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE FOR CATARRH.

Complete External and Internal Treatment for One Dollar.

To be freed from the dangers of suffocation while lying down; to breathe freely, sleep soundly and undisturbed; to rise refreshed, head clear, brain active and free from pain or ache; to know that no poisonous, putrid matter defiles the breath and rots away the delicate machinery of smell, taste and hearing; to feel that the system does not, through its veins and arteries, suck up the poison that is sure to undermine and destroy, is indeed a blessing beyond most human enjoyments. To purchase immunity from such a fate should be the object of all afflicted. But those who have tried many remedies and physicians despair of relief or cure.

Sanford's Radical Cure meets every phase of Catarrh, from a simple head cold to the most loathsome and destructive stages. It is local and constitutional. Instant in relieving, permanent in curing, safe, economical and rarely failing.

Sanford's Radical Cure

consists of one bottle of the RADICAL CURE, one box of CATARRHAL SOLVENT, and one IMPROVED INHALER, all wrapped in one package, with treatise and directions, and sold by all druggists for $1.00

FOR WOMEN.

Are you wasting slowly but surely away from the effects of female weaknesses? Are you wan, pale, and nervous? Do you not sometimes feel that life is losing its attractions, and that you are gradually sinking into a decline which, if not taken in hand promptly, will end in an early death? Yes, you have felt all these things, and doubtless know that tens of thousands of once rosy-cheeked, plump, healthy girls and women go into their graves every year solely because these weaknesses were allowed to sap up the well springs of life till nature could no longer stand the strain. There is not a sensible maid, wife or mother who will not appreciate as more valuable than gold and precious stones Dr Fontaine's new remedy PALMETTO, which is safe, sure, and speedy in curing the worst case of female weakness.

Mailed secure from observation on receipt of $1.00 I also have a full line of elegant Toilet Goods, including Face Cream and Jellies, Wrinkle Paste Fattening Formula, Auburnine, Depilatory, Acnine, Freckle Lotion, etc. Development of a beautiful form a specialty. Sealed circulars, 4 cents.

CATCHING TROUT NEAR-BY.

FISHING PLACES OF NOTE UP IN THE CATSKILL MOUNTAINS.

A Run Along Streams is of Benefit to Overworked Bodies and Brains—A Pen Picture—The Bushnellville Described—A Trip In Delaware County, Etc.

Many fishermen are still having runs of good luck catching trout in streams in the Catskill Mountains.

One feature about trout fishing in the Catskill Mountains is that success is not absolutely necessary to secure many of its advantages. Success, certainly, is the crowning pleasure, the crowning glory, but to the resident of the City a run along the streams is of inestimable benefit to the overworked body and mind. The grand rugged mountains, with cloud-capped summits, cannot fail to inspire lofty sentiments, while the more quiet beauty of the streams give generous feelings and more charitable views of humanity. The pure mountain air brings elasticity to the step and draughts of sparkling water like those taken from the fountain of youth, wash away impurities from the system. Indeed, the mind must be broadened and the whole body toned up and invigorated.

John Burroughs has said:

I am sure I run no risk of over-praising the charm and attractiveness of a well-fed trout stream, every drop of water in it as bright and pure as if the nymphs had brought it all the way from its source in crystal goblets, and as cool as if it had been hatched beneath a glacier. When the heated and soiled and jaded refugee from the city first sees one he feels as if he would like to turn it into his bosom and let it flow through him a few hours, it suggests such healing freshness and newness. How his roily thoughts would run clear; how the sediment would go down stream. Could he ever have an impure or an unwholesome wish afterward? The next best thing he can do is to tramp along its banks and surrender himself to its influence. If he reads it intently enough he will, in a measure, be taking it into his mind and heart, and experiencing its salutary ministrations. * * * Then what acquaintance he makes with the stream! He addresses himself to it as a lover to his mistress; he woos it and stays with it till he knows its most hidden secrets. It runs through his thoughts not less than through its banks there; he feels the fret and thrust of every bar and bowlder. Where it deepens, his purpose deepens; where it is shallow, he is indifferent. He knows how to interpret its every glance and dimple; its beauty haunts him for days.

In a former article THE FREEMAN described the Snyder Hollow or Woodland stream. Following the line of the Ulster & Delaware Railroad above Phœnicia there are several small trout streams with euphonious names. These, however, are barely worth the attention of the angler, owing to the small size of the fish. At Shandaken Center the Bushnellville stream empties into the Esopus. It starts in the Westkill Notch and flows through Deep Hollow Gap. The hollow is noted for its partridges and its bears. It is especially a fertile field for hunters' adventures with wild beasts. Many bears have been killed in that vicinity. The Westkill Notch is a pass through a mountain range over 3,600 feet in height. The mountains are called the Westkill chain. To a stranger going up the valley it appears as though there were no outlet until he comes within a short distance of The Notch. Then it seems as though a slice had been taken out of the mountain very much as a grocer would cut a slice out of a new cheese. There is just the width of the roadway and stream at the bottom of this defile. The mountains with their precipitous sides tower above. They are thickly covered with trees, hiding somewhat their rugged aspect and present many picturesque views. Deep snows accumulate in The Notch in the winter, and there is ice throughout the year. The Bushnellville stream flows gently through the hollow and is visited during the summer season by many people. Its wooded banks are free from underbrush. There are beautiful places covered with ferns where tents can be pitched and trees with low and wide-spreading branches upon which to fasten hammocks. It is an ideal place for picnic parties and a favorite resort for men and children who pass many hours of the day strolling along its mossy banks. There have been many trout in this stream and they are still occasionally caught there. At one time pot fishermen carried on a lucrative business by catching small fish and sending them alive to New-York for the purpose of stocking ponds, but the laws put a stop to this wholesale depletion of the streams, and the day is not far distant when it will be one of the finest trout streams in that section of the Catskills.

A TRIP IN DELAWARE CO.

[Edward L. Chichester in Outing for June.]

Just at the forks where the East and West branches of the Delaware River join stands the village of Hancock. In the days when the streams were alive with rafts the lumbermen crowded the hotels and shouted and sang in the streets; and there are vestiges of this period remaining even now, though the red-nosed gentlemen who spend their time upon the verandas of the neglected taverns might resent the title. Still, high water carries considerable timber toward the Eastern cities, and brings a few days of old-time importance to this somewhat grimy little village among the hills.

During the last few years blue stone has been extensively quarried in the vicinity, and an occasional scar on an otherwise thickly-grown hillside reveals the progress and increasing importance of this industry.

A couple of miles from the post office, the Cadosia Creek, a clear, cold stream famous for its trout, comes winding through the woods and farm lands and empties into the East Branch. A small village some miles up this creek bears its name, corrupted by the inhabitants to Cadosh.

When Simpson and I had reached Hancock by way of the West Branch we again sought higher country and shipped our canoes for Cook's Falls, or Butternut Grove, as it is also called, a small village on that fresh and rapid stream so well known to sportsmen, the Beaver Kill.

It cuts through a wild country, sometimes narrowing to quite a gorge, where its waters crowd the mountain sides, and again spreading itself in a bit of sunny valley, but never quieting into long, placid stretches. Anyone who has followed this stream will hear its roar ringing in his ear whenever he recalls the experience.

There was some question in our minds whether this water would prove navigable for the canoes. They drew little to be sure, but even the Shaw Shaw, which had no keel, could not float quite like an autumn leaf, and Simpson shook his head as we caught glimpses from the car windows of the white water surging among the black rocks down below. An individual whom we always referred to as "chump" had advised us not to try the stream.

He had called at our camp while we were at the West Branch, and had expatiated at great length on its peculiarities, dwelling with force on the fact that bear and wildcat filled the woods on all sides and that rattlers were thick as blackberries, making it risky to sleep on the ground.

"Them boats go down the Beaver Kill? Mebbe so; most everything that gets in there's boun' to go down!" and he laughed heartily. We might have been discouraged by this picture had we not learned later that the youth had never seen the Beaver Kill.

Our first day on the stream will never be forgotten. The water was fairly high, as there had been recent rains, and scarcely a moment was permitted us in which to hunch forward with elbows on knees and contemplate the panorama unfolding before us as we floated down. This had been a favorite occupation along the quiet stretches of the West Branch, but here we were either in the midst of a roaring rift, throwing our whole weight on the paddle and twisting the boats rapidly around the rocks, or standing up, scanning some white line a few rods ahead, to choose the safest opening through which to pass—a choice that always had to be made with great promptness. This need for watchfulness, keeping one constantly on the alert, and the necessity for prompt action give to canoeing its peculiar zest. A noticeable feature of the region watered by the Beaver Kill is the ancient appearance of many of the houses scattered through the village.

For so wild a country this strikes one as singular, but we learned that the spots of fertile lowland were early settled, and many of the oldest houses were built on the sites of still older. These were weather-stained buildings, with broad verandas shaded by climbing vines and having big, breezy kitchens with shining rows of milk pans by the door.

Usually the water brought from a spring in the hills bubbled near at hand and a tin cup hung ready for use. The hills here, as at Rock Rift, are being gradually cleared of hardwood, for acid factories and stump lots, covered with blackberry and second-growth oak, hickory and sassafras, are common.

In some parts these clearings afford a feeding ground for bear, who grub up the roots and feast on berries in their season, and the deer still linger in sections, though, as our course led us through the natural thoroughfare of the region, we started no large game.

One evening a tall, sun-burned man looked in at the camp.

He was driving a yoke of oxen along a highway skirting the river and, attracted by the tent, turned aside for a call.

"Evenin', gentlemen," was his cordial greeting; "huntin' or fishin'?"

"Neither," I replied, reaching for a sketch book and scanning his face in the rapidly fading light. "We're cruising through here just to see the country. Sit down." He nodded and sat down on a stone.

"I've lived over here," he remarked, pointing toward the next clearing, "fur forty year, an' the ole man was here forty year before me."

"You must have seen some game in that time," I suggested.

"Game? Wal, I should say! I wouldn't dast to tell you fellas how many deers I've killed on this very farm."

"And bear; do you have any bear?"

"Yes, some; neither's so thick as they used to be, though. Why, I had a fight with a corker about seven years ago. It was right over on that mountain yonder. I'd been fishin' down by Duck Rock all day, an' was goin' home. The fella was grubbin' under a stump, and I come right against him. He grabbed fur me, an' if I hadn't had a big knife handy I wouldn't a-been here." And he smiled grimly and pulled up the overalls on one of his legs to the knee, showing a sinewy calf seamed with the scars of deep scratches. We looked at this evidence of war and asked if there were rattlesnakes about.

"One was killed on this farm about four years ago," he replied, "but they're very scarce; we find 'em once in a while in a gully back in the hills, mebbe one in a summer. You needn't be afraid o' rattlers though."

"Can we get provisions all the way down?" asked Simpson, who was frying flapjacks. "Provisions? Oh, yes; anybody'll furnish what you want. We're all white folks, if I do say it. Th' ole man supplied more hunters an' such in his day than you could count. He never shut the door against anybody, rich or poor, till he was killed by the milk."

"The what?" said Simpson, aghast, lowering the cup he had lifted to his lips.

"The milk; the milk train. You see the road was new then, an' we wa'n't ust to steam cars."

Our caller stayed some time, holding his long muscular hands over the coals as it grew colder, and chatting in an entertaining way.

He told us the best method for capturing eels and invited us to call up at the house and get some apples, and then left, stumping down the road in the darkness, shouting to his oxen. I had an uncomfortable dream that night; a bear seemed to be standing over me, and would occasionally draw a cold nose across my hand or face. While having an impression that they would not touch a man lying motionless, I moved neither hand nor foot, but lay in a miserable nightmare trance till Simpson shook me awake and whispered, "what's that?" in a startled voice, close to my ear. "Wh-a-t?" I gasped. "Something crawled over me," he said. We both lay still and listened. Something cold touched my cheek; small wet feet skipped lightly over my face. Some leaves rustled; then it was still.

"Hark!" he said, hearing the leaves. "Do you suppose that could be a rattler?" "If it is it has feet," I muttered; "something walked on me, nothing crawled; it was probably a field mouse;" and throwing my arms about to frighten off the intruder, if he still remained, I turned over and went to sleep. Simpson did the same. Only the possibility of a visit from a rattlesnake could keep us awake after the day's exertion. A search among the blankets the next morning revealed a small frog.

On this cruise we learned many of the finer points of canoeing. A stream like the Beaver Kill affords a variety of conditions that more placid waters lack. Its surface, reflecting the bottom, shone a rich, transparent brown, the deep and shallow stretches presenting little variety in color.

The general rule in navigating shallow streams, to keep well on the outward sweep of a bend, often failed us here, and many times the channel followed the inner bank, or wound in and out in eccentric curves that were extremely puzzling.

Experienced cruisers know how to detect hidden obstructions at a glance, but it may not be out of place to say a word on this point to beginners.

Where a stone lies just beneath the surface of a rapid stream the water slides over it with an unruffled current, then breakes back on itself, making a white boiling spot. This spot serves as a warning, but as it occurs close under the obstruction it is often difficult to see it from above.

In close quarters the canoe can be pushed through these white spots without danger, provided the treacherous stillness just preceding them is avoided. Another appearance presented by rapid water is deceptive and at first very alarming. A broad stream suddenly narrows, and the water tumbled in on itself forms a white channel full of choppy waves, an angry-looking path, but seldom, except in case of a great volume of water, a dangerous one, for it is deeper than the quiet stream above it.

Sometimes the roar in these narrowings of the Beaver Kill could be heard a long distance and the waves gave us a thorough wetting.

I carried a light hazel fishing rod besides my sketch book, and would toss a grasshopper over the eddies that swirled at the foot of the rifts. Seldom without result in the shape of a chub. The stream swarmed with these fish and they sometimes reached a full pound in weight. The trout were more numerous in the tributary creeks, where the water was colder, but in this high region it seldom grows very warm anywhere, while the mist, looking white as hoar frost and feeling quite as cold, makes the grass glisten in the early mornings, even in August. We often pitched our tent in spots where wintergreen and prince's pine dotted the turf, making a balmy bed to stretch out on. One night we slept on warm sand that lay along the shore in ridges like graves. It felt wonderfully comfortable at first, but when the rubber blanket was worked in till one's form was cast like iron in a mould, it might as well have been a bed of rock.

Some long bridges span the streams at the point where the Beaver Kill joins the East Branch, and a little village bearing the name of the latter nestles about the fork. The added volume of water below this point gives dignity to the stream that sweeps along with the steady movement of a river.

A small boy and girl, wading in the shallows, stared in astonishment as the canoes floated toward them; but the lad recovered himself sufficicetly to ask for a ride before we had passed. By shifting our cargo forward a sort of a nest was made for the reception of passengers, and the boats bobbed down the next rift with extra ballast.

A pair of fat steers standing in the river were nearly run down by the Sybaris and floundered snorting to the shore, closely followed by the boat. The young man whom I carried in the Shaw Shaw had a long string of fish, chub and dace, most of which he took pains to tell me, he had caught himself, gently implying a slur on feminine prowess. Both children were delighted with the tiny crafts that floated where they could wade and bore them in safety over the deepest holes, and the dream of owning a canoe gave an additional gilding to that long delayed heaven referred to by Simpson's passenger as "When we grow up." After we left them they stood with their brown legs in the water, like a pair of herons and watched us out of sight. We learned that farmers living along the river had each summer housed and fed children from the City, and one could not but think how wonderful the rich valley must have looked to a waif from Avenue A or the Five Points.

Along the deep, still stretches of the stream we would pass an occasional scow moored around the shadow of a rock or overhanging tree, and occupied by a fisherman. These crafts were built of pine or hemlock boards, and sometimes of plank two inches thick. One huge boat lying among some rushes bore the name of Dauntless, the title covering a whole side, in yellow letters on a red ground.

It was not a good day for fishing, our first on the East Branch; the sun was too hot and the air too still, but the conditions made it easy to inspect the ground, and we could lean over and count the black bass lying along the bottom, with heads up stream and making just enough movement of fin and tail to keep stationary against a gentle current. On a cloudy day we saw a basket filled with as fine a collection of these beauties as we have met with anywhere.

On rounding a bend at one point I found Simpson had landed and was trying to catch a mink he had cornered in a bunch of smart weed, but the game was too quick for him and ducked into the river under his very paddle. Later on, as we were floating close to the bank, some wood duck darted from under the bows of the canoes and cunningly fled up the stream. They were young, and did not rise readily, but beat the water with their wings, progressing with a noise and splash that would have done credit to a steam tug.

We camped for some days near Read's Creek. A ford used by the farmers when the river was low crossed the stream close by, and back of us rose a thick wood fragrant with wild flowers. The rhododendron with its waxy leaves and clean stems grew close around the tent, and after the sun went down and the stillness seemed more profound than ever we could hear the splash of a rivulet that emptied into a binnacle close by. We would light the lantern and read or write letters or look over the day's sketches till we grew drowsy from a very excess of snugness and comfort, and then go to sleep. A large tent proved a decided improvement on the tiny shelter one could button over the gunwale of a boat.

It afforded more commodious quarters on rainy days and left the canoes free for fishing or short excursions. The advantages offered by the canoe to sportsmen are too well known to need further comment here, but a word as to its peculiar adaptability to an artist's requirements may not be out of place. First, any quantity of sketching material can be carried without inconvenience, an advantage readily appreciated by anyone who has tramped across the country loaded like a pack horse, with color box, camp stool, easel and umbrella.

Again, with a stream for thoroughfare one passes through the most picturesque section of a country. Every bend reveals something of interest, and facing in the direction one goes each point can be noted.

The forward deck serves as a desk under which a sketch book lies always at hand, and paddle can be readily exchanged for pencil. Our plan on this cruise was to move slowly down the stream until some point of special interest was reached and then camp, often remaining in the same place for days together.

A river of any length offers great variety in scenery, and the Beaver Kill and East Branch were no exception to this rule.

The upper waters, with their thickly-wooded banks, gave way below to open meadows, and highways winding between stone walls succeeded the rough wood roads. The old hunter's estimate of the character of his neighbors in the valley proved a correct one, and excellent fare could be purchased for a small sum at almost any farm house.

Our only annoyance was an occasional watch dog who regarded us with suspicion, and I do not know that the animals could be blamed. A huge Newfoundland rushed at Simpson one morning as he was sketching by the road side, but as the artist detected a muzzle strapped tightly to the dog's nose he paid no attention to the attack and affected not to know the creature was barking at him. The dog's look of perfect bewilderment as he slunk away was ludicrous.

On visiting a strange house we would provide ourselves with an umbrella prod, a hickory stick, pointed with a chisel; but this was not often necessary, for most of the dogs along the Delaware were collies, and showed all the friendly characteristics of that breed.

As the river neared Hancock it divided and wound in and out among a succession of small islands. These were covered with masses of brilliant color, golden-rod and a dull purple-red flower predominating, while here and there were the white blossoms of boneset. Rich color gleamed in everything.

On one of our rambles back in the country we discovered a cedar thicket, the stumpy trees standing so close that the lower limbs had died for want of air and light, while the tops were clothed with dense foliage. Creeping under we found the place had an atmosphere of its own—a kind of cave-like character—and the ground was perfectly dry after hours of rain. It formed a natural home for owls and bats.

I was really anxious to meet with a rattlesnake on this cruise, if only to secure a set of rattles as a trophy, but though we both searched every stretch of rocky ground from Cook's Falls to Hancock no specimen was secured or even sighted.

I had one adventure, however, that made me fear my wish had been granted in a startling manner.

I was walking along a highway, and, feeling my feet entangled in something, was horrified to see a large snake wriggling in the dust. It is needless to say that I sprang high in the air, and the serpent made a hasty retreat, turning a very ordinary tail as he disappeared down the bank toward the river.

He was only a water snake, and not worth capture, but for a brief moment inspired all the respect due his more venomous brother.

About a week after we entered the East Branch the familiar aspect of the hills told us we were again approaching the mouth of the river. The Cadosia Creek was passed, and the blue-stone quarries told of our near approach to the union of the stream with its western sister.

The canoes carried us past Hancock, around a bend and out into the meeting of the waters. At this point we made our last camp and lingered for some days, but the trees were already showing autumnal tints, and the river smoked in the early mornings. It was time to go. We packed everything into as small a compass as possible and carried the boats to the station, leaving a stuffed dummy of well-worn garments to startle the discoverer of our last camping place. The cruise had been a delightful one throughout, and our life on the upper waters of the Delaware, a region of green forest, rich valleys and sparkling streams, will long live a vivid picture in memory.

FOR THE BLOOD.

An Important Announcement.

About six weeks ago, while at business, I was suddenly attacked with excruciating pains in my feet, knees and hands. So severe the attack that I took my bed immediately, and in two or three days my joints were swollen to almost double their natural size, and sleep was driven from me. After suffering the most excruciating pain for a week, using liniment and various other remedies, a friend who sympathized with my helpless condition said to me: "Why don't you get Swift's Specific and use it. I will guarantee a cure and if it does not the medicine shall cost you nothing."

I at once secured the S. S. S., and after using it the first day, had a quiet night and refreshing sleep. In a week I felt greatly benefitted. In three weeks I could sit up and walk about the room, and after using six bottles I was out and able to go to business. Since then I have been regularly at my post of duty, and stand on my feet from nine to ten hours a day, and am entirely free from pain. These are the plain and simple facts in my case, and I will cheerfully answer all inquiries relative thereto, either in person or by mail. THOMAS MARKILLIE.

CATCHING TROUT NEAR-BY.

FISHING PLACES OF NOTE UP IN THE CATSKILL MOUNTAINS.

A Run Along Streams is of Benefit to Overworked Bodies and Brains—A Pen Picture—The Bushnellville Described—A Trip In Delaware County, Etc.

Many fishermen are still having runs of good luck catching trout in streams in the Catskill Mountains.

One feature about trout fishing in the Catskill Mountains is that success is not absolutely necessary to secure many of its advantages. Success, certainly, is the crowning pleasure, the crowning glory, but to the resident of the City a run along the streams is of inestimable benefit to the overworked body and mind. The grand rugged mountains, with cloud-capped summits, cannot fail to inspire lofty sentiments, while the more quiet beauty of the streams give generous feelings and more charitable views of humanity. The pure mountain air brings elasticity to the step and draughts of sparkling water like those taken from the fountain of youth, wash away impurities from the system. Indeed, the mind must be broadened and the whole body toned up and invigorated.

John Burroughs has said:

I am sure I run no risk of over-praising the charm and attractiveness of a well-fed trout stream, every drop of water in it as bright and pure as if the nymphs had brought it all the way from its source in crystal goblets, and as cool as if it had been hatched beneath a glacier. When the heated and soiled and jaded refugee from the city first sees one he feels as if he would like to turn it into his bosom and let it flow through him a few hours, it suggests such healing freshness and newness. How his roily thoughts would run clear; how the sediment would go down stream. Could he ever have an impure or an unwholesome wish afterward? The next best thing he can do is to tramp along its banks and surrender himself to its influence. If he reads it intently enough he will, in a measure, be taking it into his mind and heart, and experiencing its salutary ministrations. * * * Then what acquaintance he makes with the stream! He addresses himself to it as a lover to his mistress; he woos it and stays with it till he knows its most hidden secrets. It runs through his thoughts not less than through its banks there; he feels the fret and thrust of every bar and bowlder. Where it deepens, his purpose deepens; where it is shallow, he is indifferent. He knows how to interpret its every glance and dimple; its beauty haunts him for days.

In a former article THE FREEMAN described the Snyder Hollow or Woodland stream. Following the line of the Ulster & Delaware Railroad above Phœnicia there are several small trout streams with euphonious names. These, however, are barely worth the attention of the angler, owing to the small size of the fish. At Shandaken Center the Bushnellville stream empties into the Esopus. It starts in the Westkill Notch and flows through Deep Hollow Gap. The hollow is noted for its partridges and its bears. It is especially a fertile field for hunters' adventures with wild beasts. Many bears have been killed in that vicinity. The Westkill Notch is a pass through a mountain range over 3,600 feet in height. The mountains are called the Westkill chain. To a stranger going up the valley it appears as though there were no outlet until he comes within a short distance of The Notch. Then it seems as though a slice had been taken out of the mountain very much as a grocer would cut a slice out of a new cheese. There is just the width of the roadway and stream at the bottom of this defile. The mountains with their precipitous sides tower above. They are thickly covered with trees, hiding somewhat their rugged aspect and present many picturesque views. Deep snows accumulate in The Notch in the winter, and there is ice throughout the year. The Bushnellville stream flows gently through the hollow and is visited during the summer season by many people. Its wooded banks are free from underbrush. There are beautiful places covered with ferns where tents can be pitched and trees with low and wide-spreading branches upon which to fasten hammocks. It is an ideal place for picnic parties and a favorite resort for men and children who pass many hours of the day strolling along its mossy banks. There have been many trout in this stream and they are still occasionally caught there. At one time pot fishermen carried on a lucrative business by catching small fish and sending them alive to New-York for the purpose of stocking ponds, but the laws put a stop to this wholesale depletion of the streams, and the day is not far distant when it will be one of the finest trout streams in that section of the Catskills.

A TRIP IN DELAWARE CO.

[Edward L. Chichester in Outing for June.]

Just at the forks where the East and West branches of the Delaware River join stands the village of Hancock. In the days when the streams were alive with rafts the lumbermen crowded the hotels and shouted and sang in the streets; and there are vestiges of this period remaining even now, though the red-nosed gentlemen who spend their time upon the verandas of the neglected taverns might resent the title. Still, high water carries considerable timber toward the Eastern cities, and brings a few days of old-time importance to this somewhat grimy little village among the hills.

During the last few years blue stone has been extensively quarried in the vicinity, and an occasional scar on an otherwise thickly-grown hillside reveals the progress and increasing importance of this industry.

A couple of miles from the post office, the Cadosia Creek, a clear, cold stream famous for its trout, comes winding through the woods and farm lands and empties into the East Branch. A small village some miles up this creek bears its name, corrupted by the inhabitants to Cadosh.

When Simpson and I had reached Hancock by way of the West Branch we again sought higher country and shipped our canoes for Cook's Falls, or Butternut Grove, as it is also called, a small village on that fresh and rapid stream so well known to sportsmen, the Beaver Kill.

It cuts through a wild country, sometimes narrowing to quite a gorge, where its waters crowd the mountain sides, and again spreading itself in a bit of sunny valley, but never quieting into long, placid stretches. Anyone who has followed this stream will hear its roar ringing in his ear whenever he recalls the experience.

There was some question in our minds whether this water would prove navigable for the canoes. They drew little to be sure, but even the Shaw Shaw, which had no keel, could not float quite like an autumn leaf, and Simpson shook his head as we caught glimpses from the car windows of the white water surging among the black rocks down below. An individual whom we always referred to as "chump" had advised us not to try the stream.

He had called at our camp while we were at the West Branch, and had expatiated at great length on its peculiarities, dwelling with force on the fact that bear and wildcat filled the woods on all sides and that rattlers were thick as blackberries, making it risky to sleep on the ground.

"Them boats go down the Beaver Kill? Mebbe so; most everything that gets in there's boun' to go down!" and he laughed heartily. We might have been discouraged by this picture had we not learned later that the youth had never seen the Beaver Kill.

Our first day on the stream will never be forgotten. The water was fairly high, as there had been recent rains, and scarcely a moment was permitted us in which to hunch forward with elbows on knees and contemplate the panorama unfolding before us as we floated down. This had been a favorite occupation along the quiet stretches of the West Branch, but here we were either in the midst of a roaring rift, throwing our whole weight on the paddle and twisting the boats rapidly around the rocks, or standing up, scanning some white line a few rods ahead, to choose the safest opening through which to pass—a choice that always had to be made with great promptness. This need for watchfulness, keeping one constantly on the alert, and the necessity for prompt action give to canoeing its peculiar zest. A noticeable feature of the region watered by the Beaver Kill is the ancient appearance of many of the houses scattered through the village.

For so wild a country this strikes one as singular, but we learned that the spots of fertile lowland were early settled, and many of the oldest houses were built on the sites of still older. These were weather-stained buildings, with broad verandas shaded by climbing vines and having big, breezy kitchens with shining rows of milk pans by the door.

Usually the water brought from a spring in the hills bubbled near at hand and a tin cup hung ready for use. The hills here, as at Rock Rift, are being gradually cleared of hardwood, for acid factories and stump lots, covered with blackberry and second-growth oak, hickory and sassafras, are common.

In some parts these clearings afford a feeding ground for bear, who grub up the roots and feast on berries in their season, and the deer still linger in sections, though, as our course led us through the natural thoroughfare of the region, we started no large game.

One evening a tall, sun-burned man looked in at the camp.

He was driving a yoke of oxen along a highway skirting the river and, attracted by the tent, turned aside for a call.

"Evenin', gentlemen," was his cordial greeting; "huntin' or fishin'?"

"Neither," I replied, reaching for a sketch book and scanning his face in the rapidly fading light. "We're cruising through here just to see the country. Sit down." He nodded and sat down on a stone.

"I've lived over here," he remarked, pointing toward the next clearing, "fur forty year, an' the ole man was here forty year before me."

"You must have seen some game in that time," I suggested.

"Game? Wal, I should say! I wouldn't dast to tell you fellas how many deers I've killed on this very farm."

"And bear; do you have any bear?"

"Yes, some; neither's so thick as they used to be, though. Why, I had a fight with a corker about seven years ago. It was right over on that mountain yonder. I'd been fishin' down by Duck Rock all day, an' was goin' home. The fella was grubbin' under a stump, and I come right against him. He grabbed fur me, an' if I hadn't had a big knife handy I wouldn't a-been here." And he smiled grimly and pulled up the overalls on one of his legs to the knee, showing a sinewy calf seamed with the scars of deep scratches. We looked at this evidence of war and asked if there were rattlesnakes about.

"One was killed on this farm about four years ago," he replied, "but they're very scarce; we find 'em once in a while in a gully back in the hills, mebbe one in a summer. You needn't be afraid o' rattlers though."

"Can we get provisions all the way down?" asked Simpson, who was frying flapjacks.

"Provisions? Oh, yes; anybody'll furnish what you want. We're all white folks, if I do say it. Th' ole man supplied more hunters an' such in his day than you could count. He never shut the door against anybody, rich or poor, till he was killed by the milk."

"The what?" said Simpson, aghast, lowering the cup he had lifted to his lips.

"The milk; the milk train. You see the road was new then, an' we wa'nt ust to steam cars."

Our caller stayed some time, holding his long muscular hands over the coals as it grew colder, and chatting in an entertaining way.

He told us the best method for capturing eels and invited us to call up at the house and get some apples, and then left, stumping down the road in the darkness, shouting to his oxen. I had an uncomfortable dream that night; a bear seemed to be standing over me, and would occasionally draw a cold nose across my hand or face. While having an impression that they would not touch a man lying motionless, I moved neither hand nor foot, but lay in a miserable nightmare trance till Simpson shook me awake and whispered, "what's that?" in a startled voice, close to my ear. "Wh-a-t?" I gasped. "Something crawled over me," he said. We both lay still and listened. Something cold touched my cheek; small wet feet skipped lightly over my face. Some leaves rustled; then it was still.

"Hark!" he said, hearing the leaves. "Do you suppose that could be a rattler?" "If it is it has feet," I muttered; "something walked on me, nothing crawled; it was probably a field mouse;" and throwing my arms about to frighten off the intruder, if he still remained, I turned over and went to sleep. Simpson did the same. Only the possibility of a visit from a rattlesnake could keep us awake after the day's exertion. A search among the blankets the next morning revealed a small frog.

On this cruise we learned many of the finer points of canoeing. A stream like the Beaver Kill affords a variety of conditions that more placid waters lack. Its surface, reflecting the bottom, shone a rich, transparent brown, the deep and shallow stretches presenting little variety in color.

The general rule in navigating shallow streams, to keep well on the outward sweep of a bend, often failed us here, and many times the channel followed the inner bank, or wound in and out in eccentric curves that were extremely puzzling.

Experienced cruisers know how to detect hidden obstructions at a glance, but it may not be out of place to say a word on this point to beginners.

Where a stone lies just beneath the surface of a rapid stream the water slides over it with an unruffled current, then breakes back on itself, making a white boiling spot. This spot serves as a warning, but as it occurs close under the obstruction it is often difficult to see it from above.

In close quarters the canoe can be pushed through these white spots without danger, provided the treacherous stillness just preceding them is avoided. Another appearance presented by rapid water is deceptive and at first very alarming. A broad stream suddenly narrows, and the water tumbled in on itself forms a white channel full of choppy waves, an angry-looking path, but seldom, except in case of a great volume of water, a dangerous one, for it is deeper than the quiet stream above it.

Sometimes the roar in these narrowings of the Beaver Kill could be heard a long distance and the waves gave us a thorough wetting.

I carried a light hazel fishing rod besides my sketch book, and would toss a grasshopper over the eddies that swirled at the foot of the rifts. Seldom without result in the shape of a chub. The stream swarmed with these fish and they sometimes reached a full pound in weight. The trout were more numerous in the tributary creeks, where the water was colder, but in this high region it seldom grows very warm anywhere, while the mist, looking white as hoar frost and feeling quite as cold, makes the grass glisten in the early mornings, even in August. We often pitched our tent in spots where wintergreen and prince's pine dotted the turf, making a balmy bed to stretch out on. One night we slept on warm sand that lay along the shore in ridges like graves. It felt wonderfully comfortable at first, but when the rubber blanket was worked in till one's form was cast like iron in a mould, it might as well have been a bed of rock.

Some long bridges span the streams at the point where the Beaver Kill joins the East Branch, and a little village bearing the name of the latter nestles about the fork. The added volume of water below this point gives dignity to the stream that sweeps along with the steady movement of a river.

A small boy and girl, wading in the shallows, stared in astonishment as the canoes floated toward them; but the lad recovered himself sufficiently to ask for a ride before we had passed. By shifting our cargo forward a sort of a nest was made for the reception of passengers, and the boats bobbed down the next rift with extra ballast.

A pair of fat steers standing in the river were nearly run down by the Sybaris and floundered snorting to the shore, closely followed by the boat. The young man whom I carried in the Shaw Shaw had a long string of fish, chub and dace, most of which he took pains to tell me, he had caught himself, gently implying a slur on feminine prowess. Both children were delighted with the tiny crafts that floated where they could wade and bore them in safety over the deepest holes, and the dream of owning a canoe gave an additional gilding to that long delayed heaven referred to by Simpson's passenger as "When we grow up." After we left them they stood with their brown legs in the water, like a pair of herons and watched us out of sight. We learned that farmers living along the river had each summer housed and fed children from the City, and one could not but think how wonderful the rich valley must have looked to a waif from Avenue A or the Five Points.

Along the deep, still stretches of the stream we would pass an occasional scow moored around the shadow of a rock or overhanging tree, and occupied by a fisherman. These crafts were built of pine or hemlock boards, and sometimes of plank two inches thick. One huge boat lying among some rushes bore the name of Dauntless, the title covering a whole side, in yellow letters on a red ground.

It was not a good day for fishing, our first on the East Branch; the sun was too hot and the air too still, but the conditions made it easy to inspect the ground, and we could lean over and count the black bass lying along the bottom, with heads up stream and making just enough movement of fin and tail to keep stationary against a gentle current. On a cloudy day we saw a basket filled with as fine a collection of these beauties as we have met with anywhere.

On rounding a bend at one point I found Simpson had landed and was trying to catch a mink he had cornered in a bunch of smart weed, but the game was too quick for him and ducked into the river under his very paddle. Later on, as we were floating close to the bank, some wood duck darted from under the bows of the canoes and cunningly fled up the stream. They were young, and did not rise readily, but beat the water with their wings, progressing with a noise and splash that would have done credit to a steam tug.

We camped for some days near Read's Creek. A ford used by the farmers when the river was low crossed the stream close by, and back of us rose a thick wood fragrant with wild flowers. The rhododendron with its waxy leaves and clean stems grew close around the tent, and after the sun went down and the stillness seemed more profound than ever we could hear the splash of a rivulet that emptied into a binnacle close by. We would light the lantern and read or write letters or look over the day's sketches till we grew drowsy from a very excess of snugness and comfort, and then go to sleep. A large tent proved a decided improvement on the tiny shelter one could button over the gunwale of a boat.

It afforded more commodious quarters on rainy days and left the canoes free for fishing or short excursions. The advantages offered by the canoe to sportsmen are too well known to need further comment here, but a word as to its peculiar adaptability to an artist's requirements may not be out of place. First, any quantity of sketching material can be carried without inconvenience, an advantage readily appreciated by anyone who has tramped across the country loaded like a pack horse, with color box, camp stool, easel and umbrella.

Again, with a stream for thoroughfare one passes through the most picturesque section of a country. Every bend reveals something of interest, and facing in the direction one goes each point can be noted.

The forward deck serves as a desk under which a sketch book lies always at hand, and paddle can be readily exchanged for pencil. Our plan on this cruise was to move slowly down the stream until some point of special interest was reached and then camp, often remaining in the same place for days together.

A river of any length offers great variety in scenery, and the Beaver Kill and East Branch were no exception to this rule.

The upper waters, with their thickly-wooded banks, gave way below to open meadows, and highways winding between stone walls succeeded the rough wood roads. The old hunter's estimate of the character of his neighbors in the valley proved a correct one, and excellent fare could be purchased for a small sum at almost any farm house.

Our only annoyance was an occasional watch dog who regarded us with suspicion, and I do not know that the animals could be blamed. A huge Newfoundland rushed at Simpson one morning as he was sketching by the road side, but as the artist detected a muzzle strapped tightly to the dog's nose he paid no attention to the attack and affected not to know the creature was barking at him. The dog's look of perfect bewilderment as he slunk away was ludicrous.

On visiting a strange house we would provide ourselves with an umbrella prod, a hickory stick, pointed with a chisel; but this was not often necessary, for most of the dogs along the Delaware were collies, and showed all the friendly characteristics of that breed.

As the river neared Hancock it divided and wound in and out among a succession of small islands. These were covered with masses of brilliant color, golden-rod and a dull purple-red flower predominating, while here and there were the white blossoms of boneset. Rich color gleamed in everything.

On one of our rambles back in the country we discovered a cedar thicket, the stumpy trees standing so close that the lower limbs had died for want of air and light, while the tops were clothed with dense foliage. Creeping under we found the place had an atmosphere of its own—a kind of cave-like character—and the ground was perfectly dry after hours of rain. It formed a natural home for owls and bats.

I was really anxious to meet with a rattlesnake on this cruise, if only to secure a set of rattles as a trophy, but though we both searched every stretch of rocky ground from Cook's Falls to Hancock no specimen was secured or even sighted.

I had one adventure, however, that made me fear my wish had been granted in a startling manner.

I was walking along a highway, and, feeling my feet entangled in something, was horrified to see a large snake wriggling in the dust. It is needless to say that I sprang high in the air, and the serpent made a hasty retreat, turning a very ordinary tail as he disappeared down the bank toward the river.

He was only a water snake, and not worth capture, but for a brief moment inspired all the respect due his more venomous brother.

About a week after we entered the East Branch the familiar aspect of the hills told us we were again approaching the mouth of the river. The Cadosia Creek was passed, and the blue-stone quarries told of our near approach to the union of the stream with its western sister.

The canoes carried us past Hancock, around a bend and out into the meeting of the waters. At this point we made our last camp and lingered for some days, but the trees were already showing autumnal tints, and the river smoked in the early mornings. It was time to go. We packed everything into as small a compass as possible and carried the boats to the station, leaving a stuffed dummy of well-worn garments to startle the discoverer of our last camping place. The cruise had been a delightful one throughout, and our life on the upper waters of the Delaware, a region of green forest, rich valleys and sparkling streams, will long live a vivid picture in memory.

So severe the attack that I took my bed immediately, and in two or three days my joints were swollen to almost double their natural size, and sleep was driven from me. CATCHING TROUT NEAR-BY.

FISHING PLACES OF NOTE UP IN THE CATSKILL MOUNTAINS.

A Run Along Streams is of Benefit to Overworked Bodies and Brains—A Pen Picture—The Bushnellville Described—A Trip In Delaware County, Etc.

Many fishermen are still having runs of good luck catching trout in streams in the Catskill Mountains.

One feature about trout fishing in the Catskill Mountains is that success is not absolutely necessary to secure many of its advantages. Success, certainly, is the crowning pleasure, the crowning glory, but to the resident of the City a run along the streams is of inestimable benefit to the overworked body and mind. The grand rugged mountains, with cloud-capped summits, cannot fail to inspire lofty sentiments, while the more quiet beauty of the streams give generous feelings and more charitable views of humanity. The pure mountain air brings elasticity to the step and draughts of sparkling water like those taken from the fountain of youth, wash away impurities from the system. Indeed, the mind must be broadened and the whole body toned up and invigorated.

John Burroughs has said:

I am sure I run no risk of over-praising the charm and attractiveness of a well-fed trout stream, every drop of water in it as bright and pure as if the nymphs had brought it all the way from its source in crystal goblets, and as cool as if it had been hatched beneath a glacier. When the heated and soiled and jaded refugee from the city first sees one he feels as if he would like to turn it into his bosom and let it flow through him a few hours, it suggests such healing freshness and newness. How his roily thoughts would run clear; how the sediment would go down stream. Could he ever have an impure or an unwholsome wish afterward? The next best thing he can do is to tramp along its banks and surrender himself to its influence. If he reads it intently enough he will, in a measure, be taking it into his mind and heart, and experiencing its salutary ministrations. * * * Then what acquaintance he makes with the stream! He addresses himself to it as a lover to his mistress; he woos it and stays with it till he knows its most hidden secrets. It runs through his thoughts not less than through its banks there; he feels the fret and thrust of every bar and bowlder. Where it deepens, his purpose deepens; where it is shallow, he is indifferent. He knows how to interpret its every glance and dimple; its beauty haunts him for days.

In a former article THE FREEMAN described the Snyder Hollow or Woodland stream. Following the line of the Ulster & Delaware Railroad above Phœnicia there are several small trout streams with euphonious names. These, however, are barely worth the attention of the angler, owing to the small size of the fish. At Shandaken Center the Bushnellville stream empties into the Esopus. It starts in the Westkill Notch and flows through Deep Hollow Gap. The hollow is noted for its partridges and its bears. It is especially a fertile field for hunters' adventures with wild beasts. Many bears have been killed in that vicinity. The Westkill Notch is a pass through a mountain range over 3,600 feet in height. The mountains are called the Westkill chain. To a stranger going up the valley it appears as though there were no outlet until he comes within a short distance of The Notch. Then it seems as though a slice had been taken out of the mountain very much as a grocer would cut a slice out of a new cheese. There is just the width of the roadway and stream at the bottom of this defile. The mountains with their precipitous sides tower above. They are thickly covered with trees, hiding somewhat their rugged aspect and present many picturesque views. Deep snows accumulate in The Notch in the winter, and there is ice throughout the year. The Bushnellville stream flows gently through the hollow and is visited during the summer season by many people. Its wooded banks are free from underbrush. There are beautiful places covered with ferns where tents can be pitched and trees with low and wide-spreading branches upon which to fasten hammocks. It is an ideal place for picnic parties and a favorite resort for men and children who pass many hours of the day strolling along its mossy banks. There have been many trout in this stream and they are still occasionally caught there. At one time pot fishermen carried on a lucrative business by catching small fish and sending them alive to New-York for the purpose of stocking ponds, but the laws put a stop to this wholesale depletion of the streams, and the day is not far distant when it will be one of the finest trout streams in that section of the Catskills.

A TRIP IN DELAWARE CO.

[Edward L. Chichester in Outing for June.]

Just at the forks where the East and West branches of the Delaware River join stands the village of Hancock. In the days when the streams were alive with rafts the lumbermen crowded the hotels and shouted and sang in the streets; and there are vestiges of this period remaining even now, though the red-nosed gentlemen who spend their time upon the verandas of the neglected taverns might resent the title. Still, high water carries considerable timber toward the Eastern cities, and brings a few days of old-time importance to this somewhat grimy little village among the hills.

During the last few years blue stone has been extensively quarried in the vicinity, and an occasional scar on an otherwise thickly-grown hillside reveals the progress and increasing importance of this industry.

A couple of miles from the post office, the Cadosia Creek, a clear, cold stream famous for its trout, comes winding through the woods and farm lands and empties into the East Branch. A small village some miles up this creek bears its name, corrupted by the inhabitants to Cadosh.

When Simpson and I had reached Hancock by way of the West Branch we again sought higher country and shipped our canoes for Cook's Falls, or Butternut Grove, as it is also called, a small village on that fresh and rapid stream so well known to sportsmen, the Beaver Kill.

It cuts through a wild country, sometimes narrowing to quite a gorge, where its waters crowd the mountain sides, and again spreading itself in a bit of sunny valley, but never quieting into long, placid stretches. Anyone who has followed this stream will hear its roar ringing in his ear whenever he recalls the experience.

There was some question in our minds whether this water would prove navigable for the canoes. They drew little to be sure, but even the Shaw Shaw, which had no keel, could not float quite like an autumn leaf, and Simpson shook his head as we caught glimpses from the car windows of the white water surging among the black rocks down below. An individual whom we always referred to as "chump" had advised us not to try the stream.

He had called at our camp while we were at the West Branch, and had expatiated at great length on its peculiarities, dwelling with force on the fact that bear and wildcat filled the woods on all sides and that rattlers were thick as blackberries, making it risky to sleep on the ground.

"Them boats go down the Beaver Kill? Mebbe so; most everything that gets in there's boun' to go down!" and he laughed heartily. We might have been discouraged by this picture had we not learned later that the youth had never seen the Beaver Kill.

Our first day on the stream will never be forgotten. The water was fairly high, as there had been recent rains, and scarcely a moment was permitted us in which to hunch forward with elbows on knees and contemplate the panorama unfolding before us as we floated down. This had been a favorite occupation along the quiet stretches of the West Branch, but here we were either in the midst of a roaring rift, throwing our whole weight on the paddle and twisting the boats rapidly around the rocks, or standing up, scanning some white line a few rods ahead, to choose the safest opening through which to pass—a choice that always had to be made with great promptness. This need for watchfulness, keeping one constantly on the alert, and the necessity for prompt action give to canoeing its peculiar zest. A noticeable feature of the region watered by the Beaver Kill is the ancient appearance of many of the houses scattered through the village.

For so wild a country this strikes one as singular, but we learned that the spots of fertile lowland were early settled, and many of the oldest houses were built on the sites of still older. These were weather-stained buildings, with broad verandas shaded by climbing vines and having big, breezy kitchens with shining rows of milk pans by the door.

Usually the water brought from a spring in the hills bubbled near at hand and a tin cup hung ready for use. The hills here, as at Rock Rift, are being gradually cleared of hardwood, for acid factories and stump lots, covered with blackberry and second-growth oak, hickory and sassafras, are common.

In some parts these clearings afford a feeding ground for bear, who grub up the roots and feast on berries in their season, and the deer still linger in sections, though, as our course led us through the natural thoroughfare of the region, we started no large game.

One evening a tall, sun-burned man looked in at the camp.

He was driving a yoke of oxen along a highway skirting the river and, attracted by the tent, turned aside for a call.

"Evenin', gentlemen," was his cordial greeting; "huntin' or fishin'?"

"Neither," I replied, reaching for a sketch book and scanning his face in the rapidly fading light. "We're cruising through here just to see the country. Sit down." He nodded and sat down on a stone.

"I've lived over here," he remarked, pointing toward the next clearing, "fur forty year, an' the ole man was here forty year before me."

"You must have seen some game in that time," I suggested.

"Game? Wal, I should say! I wouldn't dast to tell you fellas how many deers I've killed on this very farm."

"And bear; do you have any bear?"

"Yes, some; neither's so thick as they used to be, though. Why, I had a fight with a corker about seven years ago. It was right over on that mountain yonder. I'd been fishin' down by Duck Rock all day, an' was goin' home. The fella was grubbin' under a stump, and I come right against him. He grabbed fur me, an' if I hadn't had a big knife handy I wouldn't a-been here." And he smiled grimly and pulled up the overalls on one of his legs to the knee, showing a sinewy calf seamed with the scars of deep scratches. We looked at this evidence of war and asked if there were rattlesnakes about.

"One was killed on this farm about four years ago," he replied, "but they're very scarce; we find 'em once in a while in a gully back in the hills, mebbe one in a summer. You needn't be afraid o' rattlers though."

"Can we get provisions all the way down?" asked Simpson, who was frying flapjacks.

"Provisions? Oh, yes; anybody'll furnish what you want. We're all white folks, if I do say it. Th' ole man supplied more hunters an' such in his day than you could count. He never shut the door against anybody, rich or poor, till he was killed by the milk."

"The what?" said Simpson, aghast, lowering the cup he had lifted to his lips.

"The milk; the milk train. You see the road was new then, an' we wa'nt ust to steam cars."

Our caller stayed some time, holding his long muscular hands over the coals as it grew colder, and chatting in an entertaining way.

He told us the best method for capturing eels and invited us to call up at the house and get some apples, and then left, stumping down the road in the darkness, shouting to his oxen. I had an uncomfortable dream that night; a bear seemed to be standing over me, and would occasionally draw a cold nose across my hand or face. While having an impression that they would not touch a man lying motionless, I moved neither hand nor foot, but lay in a miserable nightmare trance till Simpson shook me awake and whispered, "what's that?" in a startled voice, close to my ear. "Wh-a-t?" I gasped. "Something crawled over me," he said. We both lay still and listened. Something cold touched my cheek; small wet feet skipped lightly over my face. Some leaves rustled; then it was still.

"Hark!" he said, hearing the leaves. "Do you suppose that could be a rattler?" "If it is it has feet," I muttered; "something walked on me, nothing crawled; it was probably a field mouse;" and throwing my arms about to frighten off the intruder, if he still remained, I turned over and went to sleep. Simpson did the same. Only the possibility of a visit from a rattlesnake could keep us awake after the day's exertion. A search among the blankets the next morning revealed a small frog.

On this cruise we learned many of the finer points of canoeing. A stream like the Beaver Kill affords a variety of conditions that more placid waters lack. Its surface, reflecting the bottom, shone a rich, transparent brown, the deep and shallow stretches presenting little variety in color.

The general rule in navigating shallow streams, to keep well on the outward sweep of a bend, often failed us here, and many times the channel followed the inner bank, or wound in and out in eccentric curves that were extremely puzzling.

Experienced cruisers know how to detect hidden obstructions at a glance, but it may not be out of place to say a word on this point to beginners.

Where a stone lies just beneath the surface of a rapid stream the water slides over it with an unruffled current, then breakes back on itself, making a white boiling spot. This spot serves as a warning, but as it occurs close under the obstruction it is often difficult to see it from above.

In close quarters the canoe can be pushed through these white spots without danger, provided the treacherous stillness just preceding them is avoided. Another appearance presented by rapid water is deceptive and at first very alarming. A broad stream suddenly narrows, and the water tumbled in on itself forms a white channel full of choppy waves, an angry-looking path, but seldom, except in case of a great volume of water, a dangerous one, for it is deeper than the quiet stream above it.

Sometimes the roar in these narrowings of the Beaver Kill could be heard a long distance and the waves gave us a thorough wetting.

I carried a light hazel fishing rod besides my sketch book, and would toss a grasshopper over the eddies that swirled at the foot of the rifts. Seldom without result in the shape of a chub. The stream swarmed with these fish and they sometimes reached a full pound in weight. The trout were more numerous in the tributary creeks, where the water was colder, but in this high region it seldom grows very warm anywhere, while the mist, looking white as hoar frost and feeling quite as cold, makes the grass glisten in the early mornings, even in August. We often pitched our tent in spots where wintergreen and prince's pine dotted the turf, making a balmy bed to stretch out on. One night we slept on warm sand that lay along the shore in ridges like graves. It felt wonderfully comfortable at first, but when the rubber blanket was worked in till one's form was cast like iron in a mould, it might as well have been a bed of rock.

Some long bridges span the streams at the point where the Beaver Kill joins the East Branch, and a little village bearing the name of the latter nestles about the fork. The added volume of water below this point gives dignity to the stream that sweeps along with the steady movement of a river.

A small boy and girl, wading in the shallows, stared in astonishment as the canoes floated toward them; but the lad recovered himself sufficiently to ask for a ride before we had passed. By shifting our cargo forward a sort of a nest was made for the reception of passengers, and the boats bobbed down the next rift with extra ballast.

A pair of fat steers standing in the river were nearly run down by the Sybaris and floundered snorting to the shore, closely followed by the boat. The young man whom I carried in the Shaw Shaw had a long string of fish, chub and dace, most of which he took pains to tell me, he had caught himself, gently implying a slur on feminine prowess. Both children were delighted with the tiny crafts that floated where they could wade and bore them in safety over the deepest holes, and the dream of owning a canoe gave an additional gilding to that long delayed heaven referred to by Simpson's passenger as "When we grow up." After we left them they stood with their brown legs in the water, like a pair of herons and watched us out of sight. We learned that farmers living along the river had each summer housed and fed children from the City, and one could not but think how wonderful the rich valley must have looked to a waif from Avenue A or the Five Points.

Along the deep, still stretches of the stream we would pass an occasional scow moored around the shadow of a rock or overhanging tree, and occupied by a fisherman. These crafts were built of pine or hemlock boards, and sometimes of plank two inches thick. One huge boat lying among some rushes bore the name of Dauntless, the title covering a whole side, in yellow letters on a red ground

It was not a good day for fishing, our first on the East Branch; the sun was too hot and the air too still, but the conditions made it easy to inspect the ground, and we could lean over and count the black bass lying along the bottom, with heads up stream and making just enough movement of fin and tail to keep stationary against a gentle current. On a cloudy day we saw a basket filled with as fine a collection of these beauties as we have met with anywhere.

On rounding a bend at one point I found Simpson had landed and was trying to catch a mink he had cornered in a bunch of smart weed, but the game was too quick for him and ducked into the river under his very paddle. Later on, as we were floating close to the bank, some wood duck darted from under the bows of the canoes and cunningly fled up the stream. They were young, and did not rise readily, but beat the water with their wings, progressing with a noise and splash that would have done credit to a steam tug.

We camped for some days near Read's Creek. A ford used by the farmers when the river was low crossed the stream close by, and back of us rose a thick wood fragrant with wild flowers. The rhododendron with its waxy leaves and clean stems grew close around the tent, and after the sun went down and the stillness seemed more profound than ever we could hear the splash of a rivulet that emptied into a binnacle close by. We would light the lantern and read or write letters or look over the day's sketches till we grew drowsy from a very excess of snugness and comfort, and then go to sleep. A large tent proved a decided improvement on the tiny shelter one could button over the gunwale of a boat.

It afforded more commodious quarters on rainy days and left the canoes free for fishing or short excursions. The advantages offered by the canoe to sportsmen are too well known to need further comment here, but a word as to its peculiar adaptability to an artist's requirements may not be out of place. First, any quantity of sketching material can be carried without inconvenience, an advantage readily appreciated by anyone who has tramped across the country loaded like a pack horse, with color box, camp stool, easel and umbrella.

Again, with a stream for thoroughfare one passes through the most picturesque section of a country. Every bend reveals something of interest, and facing in the direction one goes each point can be noted.

The forward deck serves as a desk under which a sketch book lies always at hand, and paddle can be readily exchanged for pencil. Our plan on this cruise was to move slowly down the stream until some point of special interest was reached and then camp, often remaining in the same place for days together.

A river of any length offers great variety in scenery, and the Beaver Kill and East Branch were no exception to this rule.

The upper waters, with their thickly-wooded banks, gave way below to open meadows, and highways winding between stone walls succeeded the rough wood roads. The old hunter's estimate of the character of his neighbors in the valley proved a correct one, and excellent fare could be purchased for a small sum at almost any farm house.

Our only annoyance was an occasional watch dog who regarded us with suspicion, and I do not know that the animals could be blamed. A huge Newfoundland rushed at Simpson one morning as he was sketching by the road side, but as the artist detected a muzzle strapped tightly to the dog's nose he paid no attention to the attack and affected not to know the creature was barking at him. The dog's look of perfect bewilderment as he slunk away was ludicrous.

On visiting a strange house we would provide ourselves with an umbrella prod, a hickory stick, pointed with a chisel; but this was not often necessary, for most of the dogs along the Delaware were collies, and showed all the friendly characteristics of that breed.

As the river neared Hancock it divided and wound in and out among a succession of small islands. These were covered with masses of brilliant color, golden-rod and a dull purple-red flower predominating, while here and there were the white blossoms of boneset. Rich color gleamed in everything.

On one of our rambles back in the country we discovered a cedar thicket, the stumpy trees standing so close that the lower limbs had died for want of air and light, while the tops were clothed with dense foliage. Creeping under we found the place had an atmosphere of its own—a kind of cave-like character—and the ground was perfectly dry after hours of rain. It formed a natural home for owls and bats.

I was really anxious to meet with a rattlesnake on this cruise, if only to secure a set of rattles as a trophy, but though we both searched every stretch of rocky ground from Cook's Falls to Hancock no specimen was secured or even sighted.

I had one adventure, however, that made me fear my wish had been granted in a startling manner.

I was walking along a highway, and, feeling my feet entangled in something, was horrified to see a large snake wriggling in the dust. It is needless to say that I sprang high in the air, and the serpent made a hasty retreat, turning a very ordinary tail as he disappeared down the bank toward the river.

He was only a water snake, and not worth capture, but for a brief moment inspired all the respect due his more venomous brother.

About a week after we entered the East Branch the familiar aspect of the hills told us we were again approaching the mouth of the river. The Cadosia Creek was passed, and the blue-stone quarries told of our near approach to the union of the stream with its western sister.

The canoes carried us past Hancock, around a bend and out into the meeting of the waters. At this point we made our last camp and lingered for some days, but the trees were already showing autumnal tints, and the river smoked in the early mornings. It was time to go. We packed everything into as small a compass as possible and carried the boats to the station, leaving a stuffed dummy of well-worn garments to startle the discoverer of our last camping place. The cruise had been a delightful one throughout, and our life on the upper waters of the Delaware, a region of green forest, rich valleys and sparkling streams, will long live a vivid picture in memory.

FOR THE BLOOD.

An Important Announcement.

About six weeks ago, while at business, I was suddenly attacked with excruciating pains in my feet, knees and hands. So severe the attack that I took my bed immediately, and in two or three days my joints were swollen to almost double their natural size, and sleep was driven from me. After suffering the most excruciating pain for a week, using liniment and various other remedies, a friend who sympathized with my helpless condition said to me: "Why don't you get Swift's Specific and use it. I will guarantee a cure and if it does not the medicine shall cost you nothing."

I at once secured the S. S. S., and after using it the first day, had a quiet night and refreshing sleep In a week I felt greatly benefitted. In three week. I could sit up and walk about the room, and after using six bottles I was out and able to go to business. Since then I have been regularly at my post of duty, and stand on my feet from nine to ten hours a day, and am entirely free from pain. AN ALLEGED DOCTOR IN THE TOILS.

Henry Sullivan, Alias Henry Follett, Taken to New-Jersey this Afternoon.

Detective Charles L. Oliver, of the District Attorney's office of Middlesex County, N. J., came to this City on Friday with a requisition from the Governor of that State for a man who claims his name is Henry Follett, but whose real name the officer says is Henry Sullivan. Follett was indicted by the Grand Jury of Middlesex County, N. J., on the charge of having forged the names of his father, mother and brother to two notes and received thereon from a Mrs. Mattie Conover, of that County, last fall, $800. The indictments were found in April. Follett was arrested at Phoenica by officer Robert Smith, of the Sheriff's office of this City, and placed in charge of Detective Oliver. To-day the prisoner waived his right to be taken before a Justice of the Supreme Court, at Special Term here, and he was conveyed to New-Jersey. Follett went to Phoenicia last December. He said he was a physician and after hiring the office and library of the late Dr. H. R. Winter practiced medicine. It was discovered that statements he made in regard to his being a graduate of a medical college were untrue. Investigation was made. This lead to a complaint being made to the Grand Jury of Ulster County. An indictment was found for practicing medicine without registering in the County Clerk's office. He pleaded guilty at the Oyer & Terminer in April, and was sentenced to pay a fine of $50. He paid the fine, and then returned to Phœnicia to again practice medicine. Follett is a good-looking man, with dark complexion, dark eyes, hair and moustache. Officer Oliver said that Follett's home was at New-Brunswick.

Bids for First Ward Sewers.

Last night at a meeting of the Common Council of this City the Committee on First Ward Sewers reported that the bid of Francis Curran, of Poughkeepsie, was $19,478.80, and that of Peter Morgan, Jr., of this City, was $21,739.00. Both are supposed to furnish responsible sureties. Upon a vote taken, seven Aldermen voted to award the contract to Morgan. The difference in the bids, according to the report of the Committee, is over $2,000.

TOUR OF THIS TOWN AND SUBURBS.

Bits of News, Stories, Chat, Gossip and Some Remarks By-the-Way.

Last summer a correspondent of THE FREEMAN stated that the time was not far distant when bicycles would become as common on the streets of this City as wagons. The prediction has nearly been fulfilled. The craze has not been confined to this City however alone as dealers all over the country state they are unable to supply the demand. One dealer in this City says he sold over $500 worth of wheels in one week and has orders for as many more. Ladies are beginning to see the benefits derived from out-door exercise and are taking advantage of the cool weather. They are mostly riding tricycles, although a few ladies' bicycles have been ordered.

"I never allow a man to go to sleep while I am shaving him," said a barber here this forenoon. "I had an experience once that led me to this determination. I was working in a shop in Brooklyn. One day a tall, dignified-looking man seated himself into my chair to be shaved. He went to sleep almost immediately. When I was nearly through shaving him he suddenly sprang from the chair and grasped me by the throat and choked me. After a few minutes he begged my pardon and told me that I had been the victim of a dream."

This forenoon a man asked a grocer's clerk for a "quart of winegar." "You mean vinegar, sir," replied the clerk. "You understood what I wanted?" said the man. "Yes, sir," answered the clerk. "Well, then, give me a quart of winegar, and while you are about you can put me up a quart of ingyns."

THIS CITY'S BUSINESS

AS TRANSACTED BY THE ALDERMEN LAST NIGHT.

Claims for Prospective Damages—Pertaining to Certain Improvements—The Mayor Announces that He Will Veto a Certain Resolution Within Five Days.

The Common Council of this City met last night. All the Aldermen were present with the exception of Messrs. Cordts and Coutant. Mayor Newkirk presided.

A communication was read from Peter Morgan explaining his bid on "the sewers of the First Ward." On motion of Alderman Gallagher, laid on the table.

Claims for prospective damages by the laying of the trunk sewer through their lands, in the First Ward, were made by James and Alice W. Scott, William Duneman and Catherine Cummings. Referred to Corporation Counsel.

Claims against the City were read and referred to the Auditing Committee.

On motion of Alderman Thompson a former resolution directing the Superintendent of Streets to take charge of the grading of Chestnut-street was rescinded. The Clerk was directed to advertise for bids.

Alderman Beck moved that the Street Superintendent be instructed to top-dress a portion of Hasbrouck-avenue. Carried.

Alderman Murray moved that inasmuch as the constables are now paid salaries, no more bills be paid for the arrest of persons at the West Shore depot by the special officer. Carried

Alderman Coogan moved that the Recorder be requested to place all criminal papers issued by him in the hands of City Constables for execution. Carried.

Alderman Dederick moved that the Street Superintendent have flagging laid on the property of Bernard Reilly on Foxhall-avenue and collect the expense for the same from the property. Carried.

Alderman Kraft moved that the Street Superintendent fill holes on Albany-avenue from Flatbush-avenue to the City line. Carried.

Alderman Thompson asked for information regarding the proper course to be taken to build a sewer on Ravine-street.

Corporation Counsel Hasbrouck said an assessment could only be made by regular proceeding according to statute.

Alderman Thompson moved that the City Engineer prepare an ordinance to be presented at the next meeting. Carried.

Alderman Beck that an old cistern on the corner of Union-street and Union-avenue be filled up by the Street Superintendent. Carried.

Alderman North moved a similar resolution in relation to a cistern on Abeel-street. Carried.

Alderman Wieber moved that the Street Superintendent repair the water cranes used by the City on Union-avenue. Carried.

Alderman Thompson moved that the Street Superintendent place the steam roller under the shed in the rear of the City Hall. Carried.

Alderman Wieber inquired if a warrant for the payment of the Harrisburg roller had been issued. Mayor Newkirk said no.

Alderman Wieber suggested that before issuing the warrant that the Harrisburg Company instruct some person here how to run it.

Alderman TenBroeck said that the Committee met the agent for the roller on Saturday morning and purchased the roller, to pay therefor $3,200, the Company to furnish a fly-wheel free and another set of new picks; contract and bond to be sent to the Harrisburg Company to indemnify the City for two years; after that is executed an improvement certificate for $3,200 to be issued.

Mayor Newkirk spoke at length in regard to the improvement of streets—that the machine should be set to work "picking up" Union-avenue, and that top dressing should be put on and rolled. He also recommended the purchase of a $500 stone crusher.

Alderman Dederick moved that the Street Superintendent be directed to employ a competent engineer to run the roller.

Alderman Hamburger moved the matter be referred to the Committee on Streets.

Alderman Wieber said: "We are acting in haste. I think we ought to know what the services of a man will cost."

Alderman Hamburger added to his amendment: "And report to the Common Council."

Alderman Dederick moved that engineer receive $3 per day each day the roller is run, and when it is not in use the engineer not to receive pay.

Alderman Tenbroeck moved that the Street Committee be authorized to employ an engineer for a month, the pay not to exceed $3 a day, and a fireman, if necessary, at a price not to exceed $1.50 per day.

The amendment of Alderman Tenbroeck was carried.

Alderman Tenbroeck, of the Committee on Steam Roller, reported, making the same statement as given above.

Alderman Kraft moved the report be accepted. Carried.

Mayor Newkirk said he had borrowed $10,000 of the Rondout Savings Bank, as per resolution of the Common Council.

Alderman Wieber, of the Committee on Sewers, reported the bids of the contractors the same as heretofore published, saying that the lowest bidder was Curran for $19,478.80. He gave the bid of Cooney at $20,479 next highest.

There was much talk on the part of Aldermen and the Mayor regarding the stipulations of the contract.

Alderman Murray moved that A. H. Van Buren be heard for Contractor Cooney.

Alderman Deiderick moved that each of the contractors be heard.

Alderman Wieber said it was unnecessary; that the Committee had carefully considered the bids. He moved that the Corporation Counsel draw up a bond, including specifications.

Mayor Newkirk declared the motion out of order.

It was decided to hear the contractors or their counsel.

Mr. VanBuren spoke at length, claiming that the bid of Mr. Cooney was lower than Curran's, because Curran's bid was for Y and T branches per foot.

Contractors Morgan, Curran, Hostetter and McGovern were also heard. Curran claimed that when he gave his estimate at $1.34 per foot for Y and T branches, he intended it to be that amount each.

There was a long discussion between those who favored Cooney and those who favored Curran.

Alderman Wieber moved that the contract be given to Curran, the lowest bidder, naming over the terms, the Y and T branches at $1.34 each.

Mayor Newkirk declared this out of order.

Alderman Kraft appealed from the decision of the Mayor.

The Mayor was not sustained.

Alderman Brinnier moved as an amendment to the resolution of Alderman Wieber that the contract be awarded to Contractor Morgan. Lost, ayes 7, noes 9.

The resolution of Alderman Wieber to give the contract to Contractor Curran for the figure named was carried, ayes 9, noes 6.

Mayor Newkirk immediately declared from the chair: "I shall file my objection to this resolution within five days."

Adjourned for one week.

The Amusement Record Here.

"Euchre," a comedy drama, was presented by the Plunkett Dramatic Company in Liscomb's Opera House last evening. In its entirety the company is the strongest and most evenly balanced that has appeared at this house in two years time. The audience was small but appreciative. Harry Plunkett in the leading role, or rather series of roles, was capital. He has a sense of what constitutes the eternal fitness of things even in a drama with sensational features, the same—the actors artistic taste and good breeding, not the sensational drama—being more or less of an innovation in the show line hereabout of late. Messrs. Clifford, Sutherland and Mackenzie did good work. The Misses Plunkett made an excellent impression. To-night "Miriam's Crime" and a farce will be presented. If merit and good taste are inducements to crowd the house, then it should be crowded to-night.

The entertainment of the Young People's Society of the Church of the Holy Spirit in Washington Hall last night in aid of the Johnstown sufferers attracted a fair audience and gave satisfaction. Previous to the rendition of the operetta "The Land of Nod," recitations were given by the Misses N. Kerr, Isabel Rice and Rose Bacharach. The children who took part in the operetta acted well their various parts. The operetta closed with a pretty tableau.

Manager Enoch Carter has given the free use of the Academy of Music for a concert and reception, under the management of J. Commerce, on Tuesday evening, for the benefit of the Conemaugh Valley sufferers.

The Street Question.

The question of the protection of the streets of this City was entirely lost sight of by the Aldermen last night. The squabble over the contract for First Ward sewers overwhelmed everything else,

THE LICENSE QUESTION.

MEMBERS OF EVANGELICAL ALLIANCE BEFORE ALMS COMMISSIONERS.

The Board Asked to Emulate the Example Set by the Excise Commissioners, and to Do Its Full Duty—Evils in This City Pointed Out—Various Statements Made.

The Board of Alms Commissioners met at the City Hall last night. There were present E. M. Brigham, who presided, W. L. Tietjen, James L. VanDeusen, David Mulholland, Henry Koltz, Charles VanWoert, William A. Turner and G. L. Wachmeyer. William B. Scott, Superintendent of the Alms House, was Secretary.

Bills to the amount of $1,556 were read, and warrants were ordered issued.

Mr. Tietjen, Chairman of the Committee on Supplies, presented the Superintendent's requisitions for June. The Committee was given power to purchase needed supplies.

A Committee representing the Evangelical Alliance, consisting of the Rev. J. G. VanSlyke, D. D., the Rev. W. A. Shaw, Colonel Westbrook, F. J. Cheney and Reuben Bernard, was present, "to urge the enforcement of the law against all unlicensed sellers of spirituous or malt liquors." Dr. VanSlyke read the following:

WHEREAS, The Evangelical Alliance of this City embodies in large measure the confederated Christian sentiment and moral earnestness of that large number of our population who seek the moral welfare of this community; and

WHEREAS, This fact confers on us a right to embrace all lawful measures which may tend to promote this end; and

WHEREAS, The Board of Excise, with a courage which commands our respect, has resolved to make the granting of license correspond with the limits of the law and action which may be occasion for the illegal selling of liquor, therefore,

Resolved, That we petition your honorable body to proceed against all such persons as shall be found engaged in vending liquors without license and to demand without relenting, the enforcement of all such penalties as our courts shall justify.

Resolved, That we pledge to you in all such action whatever proper practical co-operation we can contribute, as well as an unrelaxing moral support.

Dr. VanSlyke further said: "I appear before you, gentlemen, as the President of the Evangelical Alliance. It may be advisable for me to state that that the Alliance is a confederation of churches united in one body to do Christian work and look to the welfare and morals of the community. In view of this fact we appear before you in relation to the license question. We urge upon your honorable body the importance of a similar action as that taken by the Board of Excise. We ask that all saloon-keepers selling without license be prosecuted. In regard to the necessity for such action it is not necessary for me to speak. Follow up the Excise Board's action by hearty co-operation. It is said there are many saloons here at present selling without license. They are the source of the greatest grief and pain. They are doing much to corrupt young men. I understand also that there are 13 houses of ill-fame in this City. What is to be done to get rid of them? I have spoken to an attorney about the matter and he told me that it would be difficult to secure evidence against them, but that there was one way to reach them. Nearly every one of them sells liquor. Prosecute them for this breach of the law. The Board of Excise is creating for you a new sphere of duty. I do not wish to imply that you have been indifferent or neglectful. Be firm."

Reuben Bernard followed. He said: "I understand that it has been said that the reduced number of licenses will bring to the front a large number of people who will sell without a license in open defiance of the law. Those who pay for licenses should be protected in all fairness and justice. The little corner groggeries and dens are doing a vast amount of injury to boys. Men who keep respectable places will not sell to boys, and they go to these dens. Exercise your power and stop this wholesale selling without a license. Several years ago I was attorney for the Board of Alms Commissioners, and I know how hard it is to get evidence to convict. Notwithstanding all these difficulties it is the Board's duty to make an effort to put a stop to the illegal practice. It may be necessary to expend money to do this work, but for every $10 thus expended it will be doubly saved on paupers. I ask this in the interest of tax-payers and humanity."

F. J. Cheney was the next speaker. He said: "I am interested in the morals of this City. My occupation in life brings me in contact with young men. It is a cold fact that there are sons of respectable people here to-day going into unlicensed places—calling not for beer but for something stronger. It is a blot upon the fair name of our City. In behalf of young men I make this appeal. I am pleased with the determined stand the Excise Board has taken. I am also very much pleased that the Alms Commissioners evince interest in the matter. The church people are with you on this question and will give you support in the work. There are many places where liquor is sold on Sundays. This, I presume, is no news to the Board. I believe there are saloon-keepers who have license and who are trying to do what the law requires them to do. By all means close the unlicensed places and places that violate the law by selling on Sundays."

The Rev. Mr. Shaw voiced the sentiments of those who preceded him. He said: "Saloons are the fostering places of degradation. We must guard the public welfare against this great evil. When Oklahoma was opened there was no bloodshed. Why? Because the introduction of liquor was not allowed across the border. This was no Prohibition movement. The officers of the law knew what the result would be if liquor was allowed in Oklahoma at the time. We must take an interest in this matter. The saloons affect the churches and all good precepts. Let the Board help suppress this vice and help elevate the moral tone of the City."

The President of the Board told the Committee that for the past few years the Board had made extraordinary effort to bring violators of the law to justice. "Two years ago suits were brought against 20 saloon-keepers and the Board recovered judgments. As many of the offenders were too poor to pay the judgment the cases were settled by them paying the costs and taking out license. In one or two instances the guilty parties were put in jail. It is very difficult to procure evidence that will convict. The laws of the State are so peculiar that it is necessary to have detectives to gather such evidence. I am satisfied the Sunday law is being broken, but at the same time have no positive evidence that such is the fact. It is hard for the Board to determine just what course to pursue in the matter. It is easy for people to say have the saloon-keepers arrested, but we have got to have the evidence that they have violated the law before there can be a conviction."

Colonel Westbrook said that although the spy system was not favored in this country, he believed inspectors should be employed by the Board, and, if necessary, employ detectives, and that when evidence is procured it should be submitted to the Grand Jury.

Dr. VanSlyke said that inasmuch as the Excise Board had cut down the number of hotels, that it was to be expected that violations of the law would become more flagrant and conspicuous, and for that reason the Alliance had decided to forewarn the Alms Commissioners.

Commissioner Turner said that in order to procure evidence a man must drink liquor in a saloon, and tell what kind of liquor it was that he drank. It must be positive evidence. He said that on any person giving evidence that a saloon is selling without a license or is selling on Sundays the Board will prosecute.

E. M. Brigham believed that it would be the more effective way of disposing of such cases to bring them before the Grand Jury.

Professor Cheney said people had been derelect in their duty in this matter. "This curse of drinking does not stop with the male sex or lower classes, nor any one color. If there is a remedy to stop the evil I believe it can be got and put in force."

The President of the Board said: "We will make every effort to suppress the evil."

The Alms Commissioners then went into executive session.

It Costs Less.

On the question of real economy Hood's Sarsaparilla is so far ahead of other preparations as to place them entirely out of the race as competitors. Here are facts in regard to this popular medicine, easily susceptible of conclusive proof:

1. Hood's Sarsaparilla costs the Manufacturer more than any other competing preparation, because it is more highly concentrated and contains more real medicinal value.

2. It costs the Jobber more, as a consequence of the fact just stated.

3. It costs the Retail Druggist more, for the same reason—as can easily be learned by inquiry. Hence the desire of some retailers to sell their own preparations, which costs them less, and for which they get the same price, thus making more money. But

4. It costs the Consumer less than any other medicine, because of its greater concentrated strength and the quantity in each bottle, and because it is the only preparation of which can truly be said, "100 Doses One Dollar."

That the people appreciate this is shown by the fact that Hood's Sarsaparilla has the Largest Sale of any sarsaparilla or blood purifier. It possesses peculiar merit and effects wonderful cures.

A Point for You.

When you buy a medicine, you want the best. Ask for Hood's Sarsaparilla, and insist upon having it. Do not let any argument or persuasion influence you to buy what you do not want. Be sure to get Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"Last spring I was completely fagged out. My strength left me and I felt sick and miserable all the time, so that I could hardly attend to my business. I procured one bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and it cured me." R. C. BEGOLE, Editor Enterprise Belleville, Mich.

AN ALLEGED DOCTOR IN THE TOILS.

Henry Sullivan, Alias Henry Follett, Taken to New-Jersey this Afternoon.

Detective Charles L. Oliver, of the District Attorney's office of Middlesex County, N. J., came to this City on Friday with a requisition from the Governor of that State for a man who claims his name is Henry Follett, but whose real name the officer says is Henry Sullivan. Follett was indicted by the Grand Jury of Middlesex County, N. J., on the charge of having forged the names of his father, mother and brother to two notes and received thereon from a Mrs. Mattie Conover, of that County, last fall, $800. The indictments were found in April. Follett was arrested at Phoenica by officer Robert Smith, of the Sheriff's office of this City, and placed in charge of Detective Oliver. To-day the prisoner waived his right to be taken before a Justice of the Supreme Court, at Special Term here, and he was conveyed to New-Jersey. Follett went to Phoenicia last December. He said he was a physician and after hiring the office and library of the late Dr. H. R. Winter practiced medicine. It was discovered that statements he made in regard to his being a graduate of a medical college were untrue. Investigation was made. This lead to a complaint being made to the Grand Jury of Ulster County. An indictment was found for practicing medicine without registering in the County Clerk's office. He pleaded guilty at the Oyer & Terminer in April, and was sentenced to pay a fine of $50. He paid the fine, and then returned to Phœnicia to again practice medicine. Follett is a good-looking man, with dark complexion, dark eyes, hair and moustache. Officer Oliver said that Follett's home was at New-Brunswick.

Bids for First Ward Sewers.

Last night at a meeting of the Common Council of this City the Committee on First Ward Sewers reported that the bid of Francis Curran, of Poughkeepsie, was $19,478.80, and that of Peter Morgan, Jr., of this City, was $21,739.00. Both are supposed to furnish responsible sureties. Upon a vote taken, seven Aldermen voted to award the contract to Morgan. The difference in the bids, according to the report of the Committee, is over $2,000.

TOUR OF THIS TOWN AND SUBURBS.

Bits of News, Stories, Chat, Gossip and Some Remarks By-the-Way.

Last summer a correspondent of THE FREEMAN stated that the time was not far distant when bicycles would become as common on the streets of this City as wagons. The prediction has nearly been fulfilled. The craze has not been confined to this City however alone as dealers all over the country state they are unable to supply the demand. One dealer in this City says he sold over $500 worth of wheels in one week and has orders for as many more. Ladies are begining to see the benefits derived from out-door exercise and are taking advantage of the cool weather. They are mostly riding tricycles, although a few ladies' bicycles have been ordered.

"I never allow a man to go to sleep while I am shaving him," said a barber here this forenoon. "I had an experience once that led me to this determination. I was working in a shop in Brooklyn. One day a tall, dignified-looking man seated himself into my chair to be shaved. He went to sleep almost immediately. When I was nearly through shaving him he suddenly sprang from the chair and grasped me by the throat and choked me. After a few minutes he begged my pardon and told me that I had been the victim of a dream."

This forenoon a man asked a grocer's clerk for a "quart of winegar." "You mean vinegar, sir," replied the clerk. "You understood what I wanted?" said the man. "Yes, sir," answered the clerk. "Well, then, give me a quart of winegar, and while you are about you can put me up a quart of ingyns."

Yesterday a Dutchess County farmer named James Wynkoop, sold to a butcher here a spring lamb, between four and five months old, that weighed 78 pounds alive, 52 pounds dressed. The butcher said that such a large lamb at this season of the year is something unusual.

THIS CITY'S BUSINESS

AS TRANSACTED BY THE ALDERMEN LAST NIGHT.

Claims for Prospective Damages—Pertaining to Certain Improvements—The Mayor Announces that He Will Veto a Certain Resolution Within Five Days.

The Common Council of this City met last night. All the Aldermen were present with the exception of Messrs. Cordts and Coutant. Mayor Newkirk presided.

A communication was read from Peter Morgan explaining his bid on "the sewers of the First Ward." On motion of Alderman Gallagher, laid on the table.

Claims for prospective damages by the laying of the trunk sewer through their lands, in the First Ward, were made by James and Alice W. Scott, William Duneman and Catherine Cummings. Referred to Corporation Counsel.

Claims against the City were read and referred to the Auditing Committee.

On motion of Alderman Thompson a former resolution directing the Superintendent of Streets to take charge of the grading of Chestnut-street was rescinded. The Clerk was directed to advertise for bids.

Alderman Beck moved that the Street Superintendent be instructed to top-dress a portion of Hasbrouck-avenue. Carried.

Alderman Thompson asked for information regarding the proper course to be taken to build a sewer on Ravine-street.

Corporation Counsel Hasbrouck said an assessment could only be made by regular proceeding according to statute.

Alderman Thompson moved that the City Engineer prepare an ordinance to be presented at the next meeting. Carried.

Alderman Beck that an old cistern on the corner of Union-street and Union-avenue be filled up by the Street Superintendent. Carried.

Alderman North moved a similar resolution in relation to a cistern on Abeel-street. Carried.

Alderman Wieber moved that the Street Superintendeat repair the water cranes used by the City on Union-avenue. Carried.

Alderman Thompson moved that the Street Superintendent place the steam roller under the shed in the rear of the City Hall. Carried.

Alderman Wieber inquired if a warrant for the payment of the Harrisburg roller had been issued. Mayor Newkirk said no.

Alderman Wieber suggested that before issuing the warrant that the Harrisburg Company instruct some person here how to run it.

Alderman TenBroeck said that the Committee met the agent for the roller on Saturday morning and purchased the roller, to pay therefor $3,200, the Company to furnish a fly-wheel free and another set of new picks; contract and bond to be sent to the Harrisburg Company to indemnify the City for two years; after that is executed an improvement certificate for $3,200 to be issued.

Mayor Newkirk spoke at length in regard to the improvement of streets—that the machine should be set to work "picking up" Union-avenue, and that top dressing should be put on and rolled. He also recommended the purchase of a $500 stone crusher.

Alderman Dederick moved that the Street Superintendent be directed to employ a competent engineer to run the roller.

Alderman Hamburger moved the matter be referred to the Committee on Streets.

Alderman Wieber said: "We are acting in haste. I think we ought to know what the services of a man will cost."

Alderman Hamburger added to his amendment: "And report to the Common Council."

Alderman Dederick moved that engineer receive $3 per day each day the roller is run, and when it is not in use the engineer not to receive pay.

Alderman Tenbroeck moved that the Street Committee be authorized to employ an engineer for a month, the pay not to exceed $3 a day, and a fireman, if necessary, at a price not to exceed $1.50 per day.

The amendment of Alderman Tenbroeck was carried.

Alderman Tenbroeck, of the Committee on Steam Roller, reported, making the same statement as given above.

Alderman Kraft moved the report be accepted. Carried.

Mayor Newkirk said he had borrowed $10,000 of the Rondout Savings Bank, as per resolution of the Common Council.

Alderman Wieber, of the Committee on Sewers, reported the bids of the contractors the same as heretofore published, saying that the lowest bidder was Curran for $19,478.80. He gave the bid of Cooney at $20,479 next highest.

There was much talk on the part of Aldermen and the Mayor regarding the stipulations of the contract.

Alderman Murray moved that A. H. Van Buren be heard for Contractor Cooney.

Alderman Deiderick moved that each of the contractors be heard.

Alderman Wieber said it was unnecessary; that the Committee had carefully considered the bids. He moved that the Corporation Counsel draw up a bond, including specifications.

Mayor Newkirk declared the motion out of order.

It was decided to hear the contractors or their counsel.

Mr. VanBuren spoke at length, claiming that the bid of Mr. Cooney was lower than Curran's, because Curran's bid was for Y and T branches per foot.

Contractors Morgan, Curran, Hostetter and McGovern were also heard. Curran claimed that when he gave his estimate at $1.34 per foot for Y and T branches, he intended it to be that amount each.

There was a long discussion between those who favored Cooney and those who favored Curran.

Alderman Wieber moved that the contract be given to Curran, the lowest bidder, naming over the terms, the Y and T branches at $1.34 each.

Mayor Newkirk declared this out of order.

Alderman Kraft appealed from the decision of the Mayor.

The Mayor was not sustained.

Alderman Brinnier moved as an amendment to the resolution of Alderman Wieber that the contract be awarded to Contractor Morgan. Lost, ayes 7, noes 9.

The resolution of Alderman Wieber to give the contract to Contractor Curran for the figure named was carried, ayes 9, noes 6.

Mayor Newkirk immediately declared from the chair: "I shall file my objection to this resolution within five days."

Adjourned for one week.

The Amusement Record Here.

"Euchre," a comedy drama, was presented by the Plunkett Dramatic Company in Liscomb's Opera House last evening. In its entirety the company is the strongest and most evenly balanced that has appeared at this house in two years time. The audience was small but appreciative. Harry Plunkett in the leading role, or rather series of roles, was capital. He has a sense of what constitutes the eternal fitness of things even in a drama with sensational features, the same—the actors artistic taste and good breeding, not the sensational drama—being more or less of an innovation in the show line hereabout of late. Messrs. Clifford, Sutherland and Mackenzie did good work. The Misses Plunkett made an excellent impression. To-night "Miriam's Crime" and a farce will be presented. If merit and good taste are inducements to crowd the house, then it should be crowded to-night.

The entertainment of the Young People's Society of the Church of the Holy Spirit in Washington Hall last night in aid of the Johnstown sufferers attracted a fair audience and gave satisfaction. Previous to the rendition of the operetta "The Land of Nod," recitations were given by the Misses N. Kerr, Isabel Rice and Rose Bacharach. The children who took part in the operetta acted well their various parts. The operetta closed with a pretty tableau.

Manager Enoch Carter has given the free use of the Academy of Music for a concert and reception, under the management of J. Commerce, on Tuesday evening, for the benefit of the Conemaugh Valley sufferers.

The Street Question.

The question of the protection of the streets of this City was entirely lost sight of by the Aldermen last night. The squabble over the contract for First Ward sewers overwhelmed everything else,

THE LICENSE QUESTION.

MEMBERS OF EVANGELICAL ALLIANCE BEFORE ALMS COMMISSIONERS.

The Board Asked to Emulate the Example Set by the Excise Commissioners, and to Do Its Full Duty—Evils in This City Pointed Out—Various Statements Made.

The Board of Alms Commissioners met at the City Hall last night. There were present E. M. Brigham, who presided, W. L. Tietjen, James L. VanDeusen, David Mulholland, Henry Koltz, Charles VanWoert, William A. Turner and G. L. Wachmeyer. William B. Scott, Superintendent of the Alms House, was Secretary.

Bills to the amount of $1,556 were read, and warrants were ordered issued.

Mr. Tietjen, Chairman of the Committee on Supplies, presented the Superintendent's requisitions for June. The Committee was given power to purchase needed supplies.

A Committee representing the Evangelical Alliance, consisting of the Rev. J. G. VanSlyke, D. D., the Rev. W. A Shaw, Colonel Westbrook, F. J. Cheney and Reuben Bernard, was present, "to urge the enforcement of the law against all unlicensed sellers of spirituous or malt liquors." Dr. VanSlyke read the following:

WHEREAS, The Evangelical Alliance of this City embodies in large measure the confederated Christian sentiment and moral earnestness of that large number of our population who seek the moral welfare of this community; and

WHEREAS, This fact confers on us a right to embrace all lawful measures which may tend to promote this end; and

WHEREAS, The Board of Excise, with a courage which commands our respect, has resolved to make the granting of license correspond with the limits of the law and action which may be occasion for the illegal selling of liquor, therefore,

Resolved, That we petition your honorable body to proceed against all such persons as shall be found engaged in vending liquors without license and to demand without relenting, the enforcement of all such penalties as our courts shall justify.

Resolved, That we pledge to you in all such action whatever proper practical co-operation we can contribute, as well as an unrelaxing moral support.

Dr. VanSlyke further said: "I appear before you, gentlemen, as the President of the Evangelical Alliance. It may be advisable for me to state that that the Alliance is a confederation of churches united in one body to do Christian work and look to the welfare and morals of the community. In view of this fact we appear before you in relation to the license question. We urge upon your honorable body the importance of a similar action as that taken by the Board of Excise. We ask that all saloon-keepers selling without license be prosecuted. In regard to the necessity for such action it is not necessary for me to speak. Follow up the Excise Board's action by hearty co-operation. It is said there are many saloons here at present selling without license. They are the source of the greatest grief and pain. They are doing much to corrupt young men. I understand also that there are 13 houses of ill-fame in this City. What is to be done to get rid of them? I have spoken to an attorney about the matter and he told me that it would be difficult to secure evidence against them, but that there was one way to reach them. Nearly every one of them sells liquor. Prosecute them for this breach of the law. The Board of Excise is creating for you a new sphere of duty. I do not wish to imply that you have been indifferent or neglectful. Be firm."

Reuben Bernard followed. He said: "I understand that it has been said that the reduced number of licenses will bring to the front a large number of people who will sell without a license in open defiance of the law. Those who pay for licenses should be protected in all fairness and justice. The little corner groggeries and dens are doing a vast amount of injury to boys. Men who keep respectable places will not sell to boys, and they go to these dens. Exercise your power and stop this wholesale selling without a license. Several years ago I was attorney for the Board of Alms Commissioners, and I know how hard it is to get evidence to convict. Notwithstanding all these difficulties it is the Board's duty to make an effort to put a stop to the illegal practice. It may be necessary to expend money to do this work, but for every $10 thus expended it will be doubly saved on paupers. I ask this in the interest of tax-payers and humanity."

F. J. Cheney was the next speaker. He said: "I am interested in the morals of this City. My occupation in life brings me in contact with young men. It is a cold fact that there are sons of respectable people here to-day going into unlicensed places—calling not for beer but for something stronger. It is a blot upon the fair name of our City. In behalf of young men I make this appeal. I am pleased with the determined stand the Excise Board has taken. I am also very much pleased that the Alms Commissioners evince interest in the matter. The church people are with you on this question and will give you support in the work. There are many places where liquor is sold on Sundays. This, I presume, is no news to the Board. I believe there are saloon-keepers who have license and who are trying to do what the law requires them to do. By all means close the unlicensed places and places that violate the law by selling on Sundays."

The Rev. Mr. Shaw voiced the sentiments of those who preceded him. He said: "Saloons are the fostering places of degradation. We must guard the public welfare against this great evil. When Oklahoma was opened there was no bloodshed. Why? Because the introduction of liquor was not allowed across the border. This was no Prohibition movement. The officers of the law knew what the result would be if liquor was allowed in Oklahoma at the time. We must take an interest in this matter. The saloons affect the churches and all good precepts. Let the Board help suppress this vice and help elevate the moral tone of the City."

The President of the Board told the Committee that for the past few years the Board had made extraordinary effort to bring violators of the law to justice. "Two years ago suits were brought against 20 saloon-keepers and the Board recovered judgments. As many of the offenders were too poor to pay the judgment the cases were settled by them paying the costs and taking out license. In one or two instances the guilty parties were put in jail. It is very difficult to procure evidence that will convict. The laws of the State are so peculiar that it is necessary to have detectives to gather such evidence. I am satisfied the Sunday law is being broken, but at the same time have no positive evidence that such is the fact. It is hard for the Board to determine just what course to pursue in the matter. It is easy for people to say have the saloon-keepers arrested, but we have got to have the evidence that they have violated the law before there can be a conviction."

Colonel Westbrook said that although the spy system was not favored in this country, he believed inspectors should be employed by the Board, and, if necessary, employ detectives, and that when evidence is procured it should be submitted to the Grand Jury.

Dr. VanSlyke said that inasmuch as the Excise Board had cut down the number of hotels, that it was to be expected that violations of the law would become more flagrant and conspicuous, and for that reason the Alliance had decided to forewarn the Alms Commissioners.

Commissioner Turner said that in order to procure evidence a man must drink liquor in a saloon, and tell what kind of liquor it was that he drank. It must be positive evidence. He said that on any person giving evidence that a saloon is selling without a license or is selling on Sundays the Board will prosecute.

E. M. Brigham believed that it would be the more effective way of disposing of such cases to bring them before the Grand Jury.

Professor Cheney said people had been derelect in their duty in this matter. "This curse of drinking does not stop with the male sex or lower classes, nor any one color. If there is a remedy to stop the evil I believe it can be got and put in force."

The President of the Board said: "We will make every effort to suppress the evil."

The Alms Commissioners then went into executive session.

It Costs Less.

On the question of real economy Hood's Sarsaparilla is so far ahead of other preparations as to place them entirely out of the race as competitors. Here are facts in regard to this popular medicine, easily susceptible of conclusive proof:

1. Hood's Sarsaparilla costs the Manufacturer more than any other competing preparation, because it is more highly concentrated and contains more real medicinal value.

2. It costs the Jobber more, as a consequence of the fact just stated.

3. It costs the Retail Druggist more, for the same reason—as can easily be learned by inquiry. Hence the desire of some retailers to sell their own preparations, which costs them less, and for which they get the same price, thus making more money. But

4. It costs the Consumer less than any other medicine, because of its greater concentrated strength and the quantity in each bottle, and because it is the only preparation of which can truly be said, "100 Doses One Dollar."

That the people appreciate this is shown by the fact that Hood's Sarsaparilla has the Largest Sale of any sarsaparilla or blood purifier. It possesses peculiar merit and effects wonderful cures.

A Point for You.

When you buy a medicine, you want the best. Ask for Hood's Sarsaparilla, and insist upon having it. Do not let any argument or persuasion influence you to buy what you do not want. Be sure to get Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"Last spring I was completely fagged out. My strength left me and I felt sick and miserable all the time, so that I could hardly attend to my business. I procured one bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and it cured me." R. C. BEGOLE, Editor Enterprise Belleville, Mich.

J., came to this City on Friday with a requisition from the Governor of that State for a man who claims his name is Henry Follett, but whose real name the officer says is Henry Sullivan. Follett was indicted by the Grand Jury of Middlesex County, N. J., on the charge of having forged the names of his father, mother and brother to two notes and received thereon from a Mrs. Mattie Conover, of that County, last fall, $800. The indictments were found in April. Follett was arrested at Phoenica by officer Robert Smith, of the Sheriff's office of this City, and placed in charge of Detective Oliver. To-day the prisoner waived his right to be taken before a Justice of the Supreme Court, at Special Term here, and he was conveyed to New-Jersey. Follett went to Phoenicia last December. He said he was a physician and after hiring the office and library of the late Dr. H. R. Winter practiced medicine. It was discovered that statements he made in regard to his being a graduate of a medical college were untrue. Investigation was made. This lead to a complaint being made to the Grand Jury of Ulster County. An indictment was found for practicing medicine without registering in the County Clerk's office. He pleaded guilty at the Oyer & Terminer in April, and was sentenced to pay a fine of $50. He paid the fine, and then returned to Phœnicia to again practice medicine. Follett is a good-looking man, with dark complexion, dark eyes, hair and moustache. Officer Oliver said that Follett's home was at New-Brunswick.

Bits of News, Stories, Chat, Gossip and Some Remarks By-the-Way.

Last summer a correspondent of THE FREEMAN stated that the time was not far distant when bicycles would become as common on the streets of this City as wagons. The prediction has nearly been fulfilled. The craze has not been confined to this City however alone as dealers all over the country state they are unable to supply the demand. THIS CITY'S BUSINESS

AS TRANSACTED BY THE ALDERMEN LAST NIGHT.

Claims for Prospective Damages—Pertaining to Certain Improvements—The Mayor Announces that He Will Veto a Certain Resolution Within Five Days.

The Common Council of this City met last night. All the Aldermen were present with the exception of Messrs. Cordts and Coutant. Mayor Newkirk presided.

A communication was read from Peter Morgan explaining his bid on "the sewers of the First Ward." On motion of Alderman Gallagher, laid on the table.

Claims for prospective damages by the laying of the trunk sewer through their lands, in the First Ward, were made by James and Alice W. Scott, William Duneman and Catherine Cummings. Referred to Corporation Counsel.

Claims against the City were read and referred to the Auditing Committee.

On motion of Alderman Thompson a former resolution directing the Superintendent of Streets to take charge of the grading of Chestnut-street was rescinded. The Clerk was directed to advertise for bids.

Alderman Beck moved that the Street Superintendent be instructed to top-dress a portion of Hasbrouck-avenue. Carried.

Alderman Murray moved that inasmuch as the constables are now paid salaries, no more bills be paid for the arrest of persons at the West Shore depot by the special officer. Carried Alderman Coogan moved that the Recorder be requested to place all criminal papers issued by him in the hands of City Constables for execution. Carried.

Alderman Dederick moved that the Street Superintendent have flagging laid on the property of Bernard Reilly on Foxhall-avenue and collect the expense for the same from the property. Carried.

Alderman Kraft moved that the Street Superintendent fill holes on Albany-avenue from Flatbush-avenue to the City line. Carried.

Alderman Thompson asked for information regarding the proper course to be taken to build a sewer on Ravine-street.

Corporation Counsel Hasbrouck said an assessment could only be made by regular proceeding according to statute.

Alderman Thompson moved that the City Engineer prepare an ordinance to be presented at the next meeting. Carried.

Alderman Beck that an old cistern on the corner of Union-street and Union-avenue be filled up by the Street Superintendent. Carried.

Alderman North moved a similar resolution in relation to a cistern on Abeel-street. Carried.

Alderman Wieber moved that the Street Superintendent repair the water cranes used by the City on Union-avenue. Carried.

Alderman Thompson moved that the Street Superintendent place the steam roller under the shed in the rear of the City Hall. Carried.

Alderman Wieber inquired if a warrant for the payment of the Harrisburg roller had been issued. Mayor Newkirk said no.

Alderman Wieber suggested that before issuing the warrant that the Harrisburg Company instruct some person here how to run it.

Alderman TenBroeck said that the Committee met the agent for the roller on Saturday morning and purchased the roller, to pay therefor $3,200, the Company to furnish a fly-wheel free and another set of new picks; contract and bond to be sent to the Harrisburg Company to indemnify the City for two years; after that is executed an improvement certificate for $3,200 to be issued.

Mayor Newkirk spoke at length in regard to the improvement of streets—that the machine should be set to work "picking up" Union-avenue, and that top dressing should be put on and rolled. He also recommended the purchase of a $500 stone crusher.

Alderman Dederick moved that the Street Superintendent be directed to employ a competent engineer to run the roller.

Alderman Hamburger moved the matter be referred to the Committee on Streets.

Alderman Wieber said: "We are acting in haste. I think we ought to know what the services of a man will cost."

Alderman Hamburger added to his amendment: "And report to the Common Council."

Alderman Dederick moved that engineer receive $3 per day each day the roller is run, and when it is not in use the engineer not to receive pay.

Alderman Tenbroeck moved that the Street Committee be authorized to employ an engineer for a month, the pay not to exceed $3 a day, and a fireman, if necessary, at a price not to exceed $1.50 per day.

The amendment of Alderman Tenbroeck was carried.

Alderman Tenbroeck, of the Committee on Steam Roller, reported, making the same statement as given above.

Alderman Kraft moved the report be accepted. Carried.

Mayor Newkirk said he had borrowed $10,000 of the Rondout Savings Bank, as per resolution of the Common Council.

Alderman Wieber, of the Committee on Sewers, reported the bids of the contractors the same as heretofore published, saying that the lowest bidder was Curran for $19,478.80. He gave the bid of Cooney at $20,479 next highest.

There was much talk on the part of Aldermen and the Mayor regarding the stipulations of the contract.

Alderman Murray moved that A. H. Van Buren be heard for Contractor Cooney.

Alderman Deiderick moved that each of the contractors be heard.

Alderman Wieber said it was unnecessary; that the Committee had carefully considered the bids. He moved that the Corporation Counsel draw up a bond, including specifications.

Mayor Newkirk declared the motion out of order.

It was decided to hear the contractors or their counsel.

Mr. VanBuren spoke at length, claiming that the bid of Mr. Cooney was lower than Curran's, because Curran's bid was for Y and T branches per foot.

Contractors Morgan, Curran, Hostetter and McGovern were also heard. Curran claimed that when he gave his estimate at $1.34 per foot for Y and T branches, he intended it to be that amount each.

There was a long discussion between those who favored Cooney and those who favored Curran.

Alderman Wieber moved that the contract be given to Curran, the lowest bidder, naming over the terms, the Y and T branches at $1.34 each.

Mayor Newkirk declared this out of order.

Alderman Kraft appealed from the decision of the Mayor.

The Mayor was not sustained.

Alderman Brinnier moved as an amendment to the resolution of Alderman Wieber that the contract be awarded to Contractor Morgan. Lost, ayes 7, noes 9.

The resolution of Alderman Wieber to give the contract to Contractor Curran for the figure named was carried, ayes 9, noes 6.

Mayor Newkirk immediately declared from the chair: "I shall file my objection to this resolution within five days."

Adjourned for one week.

The Amusement Record Here.

"Euchre," a comedy drama, was presented by the Plunkett Dramatic Company in Liscomb's Opera House last evening. In its entirety the company is the strongest and most evenly balanced that has appeared at this house in two years time. The audience was small but appreciative. Harry Plunkett in the leading role, or rather series of roles, was capital. He has a sense of what constitutes the eternal fitness of things even in a drama with sensational features, the same —the actors artistic taste and good breeding, not the sensational drama—being more or less of an innovation in the show line hereabout of late. Messrs. Clifford, Sutherland and Mackenzie did good work. The Misses Plunkett made an excellent impression. To-night "Miriam's Crime" and a farce will be presented. If merit and good taste are inducements to crowd the house, then it should be crowded to-night.

The entertainment of the Young People's Society of the Church of the Holy Spirit in Washington Hall last night in aid of the Johnstown sufferers attracted a fair audience and gave satisfaction. Previous to the rendition of the operetta "The Land of Nod," recitations were given by the Misses N. Kerr, Isabel Rice and Rose Bacharach. The children who took part in the operetta acted well their various parts. The operetta closed with a pretty tableau.

Manager Enoch Carter has given the free use of the Academy of Music for a concert and reception, under the management of J. Commerce, on Tuesday evening, for the benefit of the Conemaugh Valley sufferers.

The Street Question.

The question of the protection of the streets of this City was entirely lost sight of by the Aldermen last night. The squabble over the contract for First Ward sewers overwhelmed everything else.

THE LICENSE QUESTION.

MEMBERS OF EVANGELICAL ALLIANCE BEFORE ALMS COMMISSIONERS.

The Board Asked to Emulate the Example Set by the Excise Commissioners, and to Do Its Full Duty—Evils in This City Pointed Out—Various Statements Made.

The Board of Alms Commissioners met at the City Hall last night. There were present E. M. Brigham, who presided, W. L. Tietjen, James L. VanDeusen, David Mulholland, Henry Koltz, Charles VanWoert, William A. Turner and G. L. Wachmeyer. William B. Scott, Superintendent of the Alms House, was Secretary.

Bills to the amount of $1,556 were read, and warrants were ordered issued.

Mr. Tietjen, Chairman of the Committee on Supplies, presented the Superintendent's requisitions for June. The Committee was given power to purchase needed supplies.

A Committee representing the Evangelical Alliance, consisting of the Rev. J. G. VanSlyke, D. D., the Rev. W. A. Shaw, Colonel Westbrook, F. J. Cheney and Reuben Bernard, was present, "to urge the enforcement of the law against all unlicensed sellers of spirituous or malt liquors." Dr. VanSlyke read the following:

WHEREAS, The Evangelical Alliance of this City embodies in large measure the confederated Christian sentiment and moral earnestness of that large number of our population who seek the moral welfare of this community; and

WHEREAS, This fact confers on us a right to embrace all lawful measures which may tend to promote this end; and

WHEREAS, The Board of Excise, with a courage which commands our respect, has resolved to make the granting of license correspond with the limits of the law and action which may be occasion for the illegal selling of liquor, therefore,

Resolved, That we petition your honorable body to proceed against all such persons as shall be found engaged in vending liquors without license and to demand without relenting, the enforcement of all such penalties as our courts shall justify.

Resolved, That we pledge to you in all such action whatever proper practical co-operation we can contribute, as well as an unrelaxing moral support.

Dr. VanSlyke further said: "I appear before you, gentlemen, as the President of the Evangelical Alliance. It may be advisable for me to state that that the Alliance is a confederation of churches united in one body to do Christian work and look to the welfare and morals of the community. In view of this fact we appear before you in relation to the license question. We urge upon your honorable body the importance of a similar action as that taken by the Board of Excise. We ask that all saloon-keepers selling without license be prosecuted. In regard to the necessity for such action it is not necessary for me to speak. Follow up the Excise Board's action by hearty co-operation. It is said there are many saloons here at present selling without license. They are the source of the greatest grief and pain. They are doing much to corrupt young men. I understand also that there are 13 houses of ill-fame in this City. What is to be done to get rid of them? I have spoken to an attorney about the matter and he told me that it would be difficult to secure evidence against them, but that there was one way to reach them. Nearly every one of them sells liquor. Prosecute them for this breach of the law. The Board of Excise is creating for you a new sphere of duty. I do not wish to imply that you have been indifferent or neglectful. Be firm."

Reuben Bernard followed. He said: "I understand that it has been said that the reduced number of licenses will bring to the front a large number of people who will sell without a license in open defiance of the law. Those who pay for licenses should be protected in all fairness and justice. The little corner groggeries and dens are doing a vast amount of injury to boys. Men who keep respectable places will not sell to boys, and they go to these dens. Exercise your power and stop this wholesale selling without a license. Several years ago I was attorney for the Board of Alms Commissioners, and I know how hard it is to get evidence to convict. Notwithstanding all these difficulties it is the Board's duty to make an effort to put a stop to the illegal practice. It may be necessary to expend money to do this work, but for every $10 thus expended it will be doubly saved on paupers. I ask this in the interest of tax-payers and humanity."

F. J. Cheney was the next speaker. He said: "I am interested in the morals of this City. My occupation in life brings me in contact with young men. It is a cold fact that there are sons of respectable people here to-day going into unlicensed places—calling not for beer but for something stronger. It is a blot upon the fair name of our City. In behalf of young men I make this appeal. I am pleased with the determined stand the Excise Board has taken. I am also very much pleased that the Alms Commissioners evince interest in the matter. The church people are with you on this question and will give you support in the work. There are many places where liquor is sold on Sundays. This, I presume, is no news to the Board. I believe there are saloon-keepers who have license and who are trying to do what the law requires them to do. By all means close the unlicensed places and places that violate the law by selling on Sundays."

The Rev. Mr. Shaw voiced the sentiments of those who preceded him. He said: "Saloons are the fostering places of degradation. We must guard the public welfare against this great evil. When Oklahoma was opened there was no bloodshed. Why? Because the introduction of liquor was not allowed across the border. This was no Prohibition movement. The officers of the law knew what the result would be if liquor was allowed in Oklahoma at the time. We must take an interest in this matter. The saloons affect the churches and all good precepts. Let the Board help suppress this vice and help elevate the moral tone of the City."

The President of the Board told the Committee that for the past few years the Board had made extraordinary effort to bring violators of the law to justice. "Two years ago suits were brought against 20 saloon-keepers and the Board recovered judgments. As many of the offenders were too poor to pay the judgment the cases were settled by them paying the costs and taking out license. In one or two instances the guilty parties were put in jail. It is very difficult to procure evidence that will convict. The laws of the State are so peculiar that it is necessary to have detectives to gather such evidence. I am satisfied the Sunday law is being broken, but at the same time have no positive evidence that such is the fact. It is hard for the Board to determine just what course to pursue in the matter. It is easy for people to say have the saloon-keepers arrested, but we have got to have the evidence that they have violated the law before there can be a conviction."

Colonel Westbrook said that although the spy system was not favored in this country, he believed inspectors should be employed by the Board, and, if necessary, employ detectives, and that when evidence is procured it should be submitted to the Grand Jury.

Dr. VanSlyke said that inasmuch as the Excise Board had cut down the number of hotels, that it was to be expected that violations of the law would become more flagrant and conspicuous, and for that reason the Alliance had decided to forewarn the Alms Commissioners.

Commissioner Turner said that in order to procure evidence a man must drink liquor in a saloon, and tell what kind of liquor it was that he drank. It must be positive evidence. He said that on any person giving evidence that a saloon is selling without a license or is selling on Sundays the Board will prosecute.

E. M. Brigham believed that it would be the more effective way of disposing of such cases to bring them before the Grand Jury.

Professor Cheney said people had been derelect in their duty in this matter. "This curse of drinking does not stop with the male sex or lower classes, nor any one color. If there is a remedy to stop the evil I believe it can be got and put in force."

The President of the Board said: "We will make every effort to suppress the evil."

The Alms Commissioners then went into executive session.

It Costs Less.

On the question of real economy Hood's Sarsaparilla is so far ahead of other preparations as to place them entirely out of the race as competitors. Here are facts in regard to this popular medicine, easily susceptible of conclusive proof:

1. Hood's Sarsaparilla costs the Manufacturer more than any other competing preparation, because it is more highly concentrated and contains more real medicinal value.

2. It costs the Jobber more, as a consequence of the fact just stated.

3. It costs the Retail Druggist more, for the same reason—as can easily be learned by inquiry. Hence the desire of some retailers to sell their own preparations, which costs them less, and for which they get the same price, thus making more money. But

4. It costs the Consumer less than any other medicine, because of its greater concentrated strength and the quantity in each bottle, and because it is the only preparation of which can truly be said, "100 Doses One Dollar."

That the people appreciate this is shown by the fact that Hood's Sarsaparilla has the Largest Sale of any sarsaparilla or blood purifier. It possesses peculiar merit and effects wonderful cures.

A Point for You.

When you buy a medicine, you want the best. Ask for Hood's Sarsaparilla, and insist upon having it. Do not let any argument or persuasion influence you to buy what you do not want. Be sure to get Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"Last spring I was completely fagged out. My strength left me and I felt sick and miserable all the time, so that I could hardly attend to my business. I procured one bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and it cured me." R. C. BEGOLE, Editor Enterprise Belleville, Mich.
